BREVITIES.

A boy was recently fined three dollars in Cincinnati for being too big to play marbles.

Good boot blacks make from one and two and a half dollars a day in New York.

The common council of Kansas city has passed an ordinance abolishing goats in that city.

The manufacture of silk in the United States is a question which is receiving a great deal of attention.

At the funeral services of ex-Governor Tod of Ohio, over 15,000 people were in attendance.

Drunkennes is greatly on the increase in the English army, according to official reports.

Recently, Mr. James Willis and Miss Charlotte Eggen, both of Belmont county, Ohio, were united in marriage, the former aged 82, the bride 18 years.

A famous German prima donna, who a few years ago was paid $1,000 a night, died in a cellar in Berlin, recently. Beauty, voice and money disappeared rapidly.

The New York Evening Post says: The problem of preserving meat for long distances of travel, appears to have been solved by the Lyman Refrigerating Company, who will undertake to deliver it, after a three weeks' enclosure in their cars as fresh as if killed the day previously.

A Memphis aeronaut dropped a dog at an elevation of 8,000 feet. The animal is supposed to have sustained internal injuries, as no external marks were found, or injuries of the dog.

A Troy pig was recently exhumed from the ruins of an elevator, which was destroyed by fire a month ago, and his pigship trotted off at a lively pace. All he had to eat was wheat, for a month.

The ladies of Wilna, Poland, are indicted for wearing black or gray dresses and are flogged for disobedience. Two of the young ladies who were flogged were married next day by members of the nobility, and the whole beauty and fashion of the city were represented at the wedding.

"Tenebris Grondie" is the name of an Indian legend which was read to a Detroit audience the other night, by Hon. Levi Bishop, a Detroit poet. The name of the legend was the name of the Indian village which three centuries ago occupied the same position where the village of Detroit now stands.

A drunkard in Charleston had the horrors, and was therefore prostrated by illness. His wife got a barrel of whisky, put it at the head of his bed, and arranged it so he could drink himself at any time. He looked at the barrel a day, and then resolved to drink no more—a vow he has religiously kept for three years.

There is something as beautiful as sublime in the hush of midnight. The myriads of quiet sleepers laying down their burden, insensible alike to joy and sorrow, helpless alike the strong man as the infant; and over all the sleepless eye which since the world began has never lost sight of one pillowed head. Thoughts like these come to us in our wakened night hours with an almost painful intensity. Then eternity seems real and every day a fable. But morning comes, and the stir and hum of life chase these thoughts away as the sun dries up the dew drops, like our thoughts, performing their reviving mission ere they departed.

The following are sketches illustrative of the character of the late Mr. Swaine, the Philadelphia publisher:

A paper dealer met him one day in the street.

"Mr. S.," said he, "I have some excellent white paper of the size of the Ledger. Do you wish to buy?"

"Yes, sir," was the reply.

"What are you willing to give for it?"

"Precisely the worth of it, sir, neither more nor less."

"Of course. But I mean, Mr. S., what can you afford to give me for it?"

"Double price if I choose; but I don't."

"But fix the price, sir."

"I never put a price on another man's goods. If you don't know the value of your own paper, you should not attempt to dispose of it. If you do you are wasting my time and your own in idle circumlocutions to get the advantage of me. Tell me your price, if it suits, well; if not, you may find some other customer."

A gentleman once called upon him with an advertisement of a benefit for a poor widow with several helpless children.

"How much for the advertisement under the circumstances?" said the gentleman.

"Just what it comes to," said Mr. S.; "business is business, sir, charity is another question."

"But to a poor widow, sir, every dollar saved is a matter of great moment to her family."

"Business is business, I repeat sir. What I choose to give in charity is my own private affair. My business has nothing to do with it."

"Then you will take no less?"

"Not a cent, sir."

The gentleman paid the bill very reluctantly amounting to, perhaps $3, and was going out of the office reflecting rather severely in his own mind upon the parsimony of Mr. Swaine, when the latter stopped him.

"Do you know this widow, is she honest and deserving?"

"She is, sir."

"Mr. S. slipped a $10 bill into the gentleman's hand, and turning on his heel, walked away, saying, 'business is business.'"
