we say that Uncle Sam has land , enough to give us all a farm." Mr. Hill declared that millions of acres in the south, in places to the extent of one-tenth of the entire art-able area, have been so injured that no industry and no care can restora them.

SOIL EXHAUSTION.

"Far more ruinous," he said, "be "Tar more ruinous," he said, "be-cause universal and continuing in its effects, is the process of soil exhaus-tion. It is creeping over the land from east to west. The abandoned farms that are now the playthings of the cities rich or the game preserves of pat-rons of sport hear witness to the mel-ancholy change." Mr. Hull said that the fact of soil waste becomes startlingly evident when

It no other important country in the world, with the exception of Russia is the industry that must be the foundation of every state, at so low an ebb as in our own.

as in our own. "We are robbing the soil," said Mr. Hill, "in an effort to get the largest cash returns from each acre of ground in the shortest possible time and with the least possible labor." He said that our agricultural land had been abused in two principal ways, first by single cropping and second by neglecting fertilization. The two remo-dies are rotation of crops and the use of fertilizers. We might, he declared, expand our resources and add billions of dollars to our national wealth by conserving soil resources, instead of exhausting them as we have the for-ests and the contents of the mines.

exhausting them as we have the for-exhausting them as we have the for-ests and the contents of the mines. Mr. Hill said that 36 per cent of our people are engaged directly in agri-culeure and that all the rest depends upon it. He estimated that in 1925 the population of the United States would reach a total of about 130,000,000 people and by the middle of the century at least 200,000,000 people. He continued: "Where are they to go, how are they to be employed, how fed, how enabled to earn a living wage. We are ap-proaching the point where all out wheat product will be needed for our own people, whose mineral resources will by that time have greatly diminished, must find themselves thrown back upon the soil for a living. If continued abuse the soil for a living. If continued abus, of the land should mark the next 5 years as it has the last, what must be the outlook?"

Mr. Hill said that not only the econo mic but the political future is involved, and added:

EVERY NATION'S PERIL.

EVERY NATION'S PERIL. "Every nation finds its hour of peril when there it no longer free access to the land or when the land will no longer support the people. Disturbances within are more to be feared than at-tacks from without. It would not be strange if they should in their desire for change attempt to pull down the pillars of their national temples. Far may this day be from us. But since the unnecessary destruction of our land will bring new conditions of our land will bring new conditions of danger, its preservation, its improvement to the highest point of productivity promises by scientific intelligence and practical experiment, appears to be a first com-mand of any political economy worthy the name."

Mr. Hill, in conclusion, said: "Reviving the spirit of the days that cre-ated our Constitution, the days that carried us through civil conflict, the carried us through civil conflict, the spirit by which all our enduring work in the world has been wrought, tak-ing thought as Washington and Lin-coln took thought, only for the high-est good of all the people. we may, as a result of the deliberations held and the conclusions reached here today, give new meaning to our future; new luster to the ideal of a republic of Hving federated states; shape anew the fortunes of this country, and en-large the borders of hope for all manlarge the borders of hope for all man-kind."

Mr. Hill talked for nearly an hour and at the conclusion of his address, was warmly congratulated by the members of the convention, including W. J. Bryan, who shook hands with him

TO AUCTION WOOL THE LATEST PLAN Big Batch to Be Sold to Highest Bidder at Jericho Tomorrow.

New and almost startling developments may be expected almost every hour in the wool situation nowadays as every day for several weeks has seen some significant move, either on the part of grower or buyer. Today brought something entirely new. Several hun dred thousand pounds of wool is to be placed upon sale at Jericho, Juab county, tomorrow. The sale will be some what of a public auction, as growers will have their clip on the ground and buyers will slip pieces of paper to each owner. On these pieces of folded paper will be the prices bid upon the clips A Pullman car has been chartered and reservations are being taken today in reservations are being taken today in lively shape. Every wool buyer now in Utah will go down to Jericho and they will be accompanied by a number of railroad men, desirous of being "John-ny-on-the-spot" so routings can be ar-ranged with purchasers. The Pullman car carrying the wool buyers and railroad men will go out with the Salt Lake Route westbound train leaving this city at 11:50 tonight. Jeriche will be reached early tomor-row menning. The sleeper will be side-tracked to permit the travelers to rest as long as they desire. Business will begin early in the day as the growers have their stuff piled up now for in spection. The return trip will be start-ed tomorrow evening and the wool and railroad men will be home Saturday morning.

ratiroad men will be home Saturday morning. This development in face of the fight being waged by the Utah Wool Grow-ers' association is sensational. With other states joining Utah in the move-ment to store to create a market and with Philadelphia and Omaha putting in strong bids for some of Utah's stor-age business, the announcement that some big wool points in Utah are throwing their clips out on public auc-ition comes like the hackneyed old thunderbolt out of the traditional clear sky.

Everything was Theater-This town is under an obigation to Mr. Robert Mantell, and it is conducted upon a business like basis, and the books were chosen upon their merits, after careful consideration had be hoped that before the week ends, and the books were chosen upon their merits, after careful consideration had been given to all.
A portion of the books selected apspeared in yesterday's "News." The list, as completed, is as follows:
Arithmetic — Milne's Progressive Arithmetic, Books I, II, III, American Book, Co. Supplementary—Young & Jackson's Arithmetics, Books I, II, III, D. Appleton & Co.

Supplementary — Language Through Nature, Literature and Art, Rand. McNaily & Co. With Pencil and Penguage Lessons, Benj. H. Sanborn & Co. it will show a better evidence that it senses the debt than it has done thus far. The superb round of Shakespearean characters which Mr. Mantell is presenting mark an epoch in our stage history, but the audiences thus far can only be ranked as fair. It is pleasant to know, however, that they are steadily increasing in size, and that they include many of the most thought-they include many of the most chought-ful, critical and representative classes of the city. Yesterday's two renditions served only to deepen the impression Mr. Mantell had already made. In the afternoon he gave a most finished and scholarly interpretation of "Hamlet," holding his audience with a grip and breathless-ness which no one but a master could do. Expressions were frequent that here at last was the real successor to Booth. The conception of the melan-choly Dane was a notable one through-out, and it would have been hard to equal the effect which the reading of many of the noted passages secured. The "Hamlet" of Keene has always been thought to stand closest to the rendition of Booth, but it is a question whether the memory of Keene is not displaced by Mr. Mantell. He follows Booth so closely that it is something of a pity that he deviates from that great actor's rendition of the death scene. No one who beheld it can ever forget the acting of Booth as the pall of death overspread his face and he passed away in the arms of his friends, facing the andience. Mr. Mantell's fall and his somewhat theatrical roll can surely be improved upon. The support was as beautiful as ever, the most shin-ing instance being the Ophelia of Miss Russell, a most telling and effective in-terpretation. The "Merchant of the city.

In the evening the "Merchant of Venice," which we have had so many times in good, bad and indifferent shape, formed the bill, and swept the addence off its feet. Again it can be said that Maniell's delineation more nearly approached that of Booth than any other actor the Salt Lake stage has seen. He investe' the part of Shylock with a dignify which almost compelled sympathy, his reading, never strained, never ranting, holding the audience by the force of his magnetism and indi-viduality. The trial scene was especial-ly effective. The strength of the sup-porting cast was as strongly evident as ever, the best features being Miss Russell, who gave a beautiful delinea-tion of Portia, Miss Kingsbury, as Ne-rissa, Mr. McGinn as Eassanio, and Mr. Burby as Antonio. OGDEN POLICE FOILED.

Detective Pender went to the Union depot this morning to take into custody a man supposed to be a Northern Pacific train robber. The man's name is William Burke. He was traveling on a Cache valley car and was found at the depot on the train when it arrived. Pender had no warrant and did not ar-rest the man. He took a good look at him, however, and then notified the Salt Lake police to look out for him. The man had on a fur cap as part of his clothing and this was the particular point the Salt Lake officers were told to watch for. He was said by the Og-den police to be on a RIo Grande train arriving here at 11:55. Chief Pitt and a detail of officers met the train, but after a search failed to find their man. The conductor of the train declares that a man with a fur cap jumped from the rear platform of the train just as it left Ogden.
