SUGAR MAKING BEGINS MONDAY

Amalgamated Campaign Opens One Week Earlier Than Last Year.

TO CARE FOR LARGER CROP.

Depot Grounds Will be Beautified—New Minister for Methodist Church—Happy Wedding Bells.

Ogden, Sept. 12.—The season's campaign at the Ogden factory of the Amalgamated Sugar company will be commenced next Monday. The sampling of the sugar beets is being completed, and while the sugar producing qualities are a little low yet the management feel that it is best to commence running the beets through so as to be able to finish the run early in January. The reports brought to the company's office from all parts of the district furnishing beets for the Ogden factory show a wonderful increase in the quantity of beets, and while the increase in tonnage will make up the difference, and for most of the beet growers this will be a great advantage. There are but a few of the products in this county where the beets are not contracted. Notices are being sent out now to the company to the farmers who have their beets by team to commence digging at once, so that by Monday sufficient beets will be in the sheds to start the whole running which will continue the run night and day until the entire output is completed. Last year the run was commenced one week later.

TO BEAUTIFY DEPOT GROUNDS.

Corey Brothers Have Contract for Grading Same.

Ogden, Sept. 12.—The Corey Brothers Construction company is the successful bidder for the grading of the Union depot grounds, the contract having been awarded it by the depot company. The work to be done is the leveling and grading of all the ground east of the depot building and the main tracks between Twenty-fourth and Twenty-sixth streets to Wall avenue. When the work is completed by the construction company the depot company has a number of landscape gardeners and engineers it will put on the grounds to lay out walks, flower beds, and plant shrubbery. It is the intention of the company to plant the grass seed this season so that by spring time it will be green and beautiful. When completed the grounds will be artistic and tend to give a much more favorable impression of the city as they enter it.

NEW METHODIST MINISTER.

Rev. Samuel Blair, who has been in the east for several weeks in attendance at the Methodist conference, has been called to leave his Ogden congregation and go to El Paso, Texas, to take charge of the pastorate there. Rev. Blair came to Ogden a little more than three years ago to take charge of the Methodist church here, which duty he has performed well, giving good satisfaction to his followers. He will regret to leave him here, when Mr. Blair came to Ogden the church was several thousand dollars in debt. He immediately set to work to clear the indebtedness and succeeded in the work so well that last spring the mortgage was burned and the church made free from debt. He has also looked well after his congregation. His successor will be Rev. Crane of the west Nebraska conference, who will arrive in a very short time.

The box office opened today for the season which is very good.

BRIEFS AND PERSONALS.

Levi B. Hammond left last evening for Idaho where he has a large contract for grade work on the Yellowstone park line. He says he wants to get as much of the 30 miles as possible finished before snow falls.

Al Howard, a porter in a local barber shop, was placed under arrest by the police on the charge of assault and battery preferred against him by his wife.

Miss Mabel Jacobson has gone east to Lexington, Kan., to spend a few months.

BEEF DIGGING ORDERED.

Orders have been sent out from the Lehi factory to a large number of the farmers throughout the district to commence digging beets Monday next, Sept. 17, and the factory will start up Sept. 20. The Lehi factory and Spanish Fork cutting stations will start cutting beets for the campaign, and the Provo and Springville plants will start up later. The past ten days the beets have been harvested most rapidly, and the work of harvesting will continue with a rush after next Monday. There is every reason to believe this will be the most successful year in the history of the company.

DEATH OF JOHN C. DALTON.

Native of Southern Utah Succumbs to Stomach Trouble.

Special Correspondence.
Manassa, Conejos Co., Colo., Sept. 5.—Funeral services were held in the stake house yesterday over the remains of John C. Dalton, who died Aug. 31 of stomach trouble. He has been a great sufferer for the past 15 months. The funeral was one of the largest ever followed in this state. Sixty-six vehicles followed the remains to the cemetery.

John C. Dalton was born at Panguitch, Iron county, Utah, Jan. 9, 1855; was a pioneer explorer to the San Juan county in 1879; came to this place in the early settlement and in 1883 was called to be the bishop of Manassa, which position he filled for about 13 years. ## LUMPIAW IN CATTLE.

The iodine of Potassium Treatment an Acknowledged Success.

A few years ago lumpjaw in cattle was considered an incurable disease; but, thanks to some scientific work done by our bureau of animal industry, we can safely say that fully 90 per cent of cases can be sufficiently cured to render both the milk and meat of an animal safe to use for human food, writes C. D. Smead, V. S., in N. Y. Tribune. The treatment is simple, he continues, and the cause, which is now fully known, is simple. On forage plants of various kinds is found under the microscope a fungus plant growing, which has been named the Ray fungus. When hay containing this and plants like corn are used for animal food this Ray fungus is taken into the system with the food. It will not infect the animal only as there happens to be a raw surface somewhere in the mouth, on the tongue or in the throat, when, if the fungus comes in contact with it, it enters the system. Thus one can readily see that an animal masticating hard food can easily have a sore gum around a tooth, or the tongue may become scratched with some woody food or briar, or the throat be made sore by swallowing harsh food. Thus it is that either the jaw, tongue or glands of the throat are the points where generally where the disease manifests itself. It is a rule, progresses slowly, yet sometimes there are more seeds (spores) of the fungus planted than at other times, and again they may, like plants, grow more rapidly in some animal's tissues than in others. It is their growing and feeding upon the tissues where they lodge which causes the lump, with the subsequent ulceration.

The cure consists simply in so iodizing the system as to destroy the fungus cannot live in it and it dies. In short, as Dr. Alexander, of Wisconsin, expresses it, we so poison the animal with the iodine of potash that it kills the Ray fungus which is feeding on it. Now, right here I desire to call the attention of the reader to a variance of opinion which exists among veterinarians. Some claim the proper way to treat either steer or cow is to give the iodine in such large doses daily as to soon cause sickness of the animal; in fact, to well high poison. If a cow be well rendered her milk wholly unfit for human food, and as a rule will cause her to dry up, and if pregnant, probably to abort. If a steer, it will cause it to run down in flesh rapidly, droop at the mouth and become scurvy. In short, the overdosing, or heroic dosing, while it will cure lumpjaw, will nearly kill the animal also, or at least so reduce it as to make it of little value afterward.

Now, I know I am likely to be criticized when I say that I don't from past experience, believe any poisonous dosing is necessary in a case when taking a day given by making it with sugar in fact, it would only be a long standing case—a sort of kill or cure case—that I would recommend two drams being given each day, in two doses, as many veterinarians high in standing are recommending. A dram dose a day, given by making it with sugar and a little salt to make it palatable, can be stirred into a feed of wheat bran or ground feed and fed to the animal, and it will just as surely, though slowly, saturate the system, and effect a cure as to dissolve the dose in water and pour down into the stomach. In fact, I think the constitutional effect is better when given in the food. No injury to the stomach has ever been noticed when given in the food.

Again, I use no reason, except in the well advanced cases, of women saturating the system (poisoning it) by giving it two dram doses. In the one dram dose given in the food the cow will not dry up, neither will her milk be seriously affected, neither will the steer's growth be checked. As a rule, a dram a day given for a month, then skipping two weeks and repeating, will, if given in time, stop further progress of the disease when tissues other than the tongue are involved. In case the fungus is located in a gland or on the jaw, the use of either the strong tincture of iodine or iodine ointment is advisable, as there is no doubt that iodine will be penetrating the tissues place them in such a condition that the fungus cannot continue to grow in them. In advanced cases the surgeon's knife can be used, but it is wisdom on the part of cattle owners to prevent the disease getting to the advanced stage. Stop it before it becomes necessary to employ the surgeon. The remedy will not always cause the lump to disappear, but that does not matter so long as we kill the fungus and arrest further progress of the disease. The question may be asked, How are farmers to tell whether it is lumpjaw or not? They can not. The safe way is to consider all swellings about the jaws and glands of the throat as suspicious, and treat them as directed.

PRESERVING JACOB ABBOTT'S HOME.

Every reader of the Rollo books will be glad to hear of a movement to rehabilitate the home of Jacob Abbott, at Farmington, Me. The old home, known as Fewacres, is beginning to take on the memorial character, the grounds have been tidied up, the house painted and repaired, the pictures of the father and grandfather have been hung and a historical chart placed in position giving the history of the house since 1828. Best of all, the indebtedness has been reduced to about $500. Lyman Abbott and Edward Abbott, rector of St. James' church, Cambridge, the youngest two of the four sons, are the only surviving children. It would seem as though that $500 indebtedness should melt at this season like a small cake of ice on a city sidewalk. Boston has just buried another story-teller for boys, George B. Ferry, who was, besides being a writer on historical and political subjects of no mean capacity, a printer at the case in newspaper offices. He had five popular volumes for boys published in Boston, New York and London, and many notable newspaper articles famous in their brief hour of remark. Like Franklin, he had been a printer's apprentice, and, like Franklin, while he was learning his trade he read extensively, and what he read he remembered. The Press club still quotes his saying to Boyle O'Reilly: "I don't believe you ever forgave Queen Victoria for not hanging you," and the Irish poet's reply: "No, George, I don't believe I ever did."—Boston Transcript.

A FIELD-MARSHAL OF THRIFT.

Russell Sage was nothing momentous as a captain of industry, but he was a field-marshal of thrift. He was an amusing person, neutral-tinted as to most things, fond of money for its own sake, and good at getting and keeping it. The most significant fact that is back of the careers of most of the great money-getters is that they wanted money early and wanted it very much. It was so with Uncle Russell. He was poor when he was a boy, and made up his mind that he would not be poor when he was grown up. Accordingly he worked hard and was very saving. Moreover, he was smart, a great deal smarter than common. What he put his hand to do went. He was

A LETTER TO OUR READERS.

23 Cottage St. Melrose, Mass.

Dear Sir:—Ever since I was in the Army, I had more or less kidney trouble, and within the past year it became so severe and complicated that I suffered everything and was much alarmed—my strength and power was fast leaving me. I saw an advertisement of Swamp-Root and wrote asking for advice. I began the use of the medicine and noted a decided improvement after taking Swamp-Root only a short time.

I continued its use and am thankful to say that I am entirely cured and strong. In order to be very sure about this, I had a doctor examine some of my water today and he pronounced it all right and in splendid condition. I know that your Swamp-Root is purely vegetable and does not contain any harmful drugs. Thanking you for my complete recovery and recommending Swamp-Root to all sufferers I am,

Very truly yours,

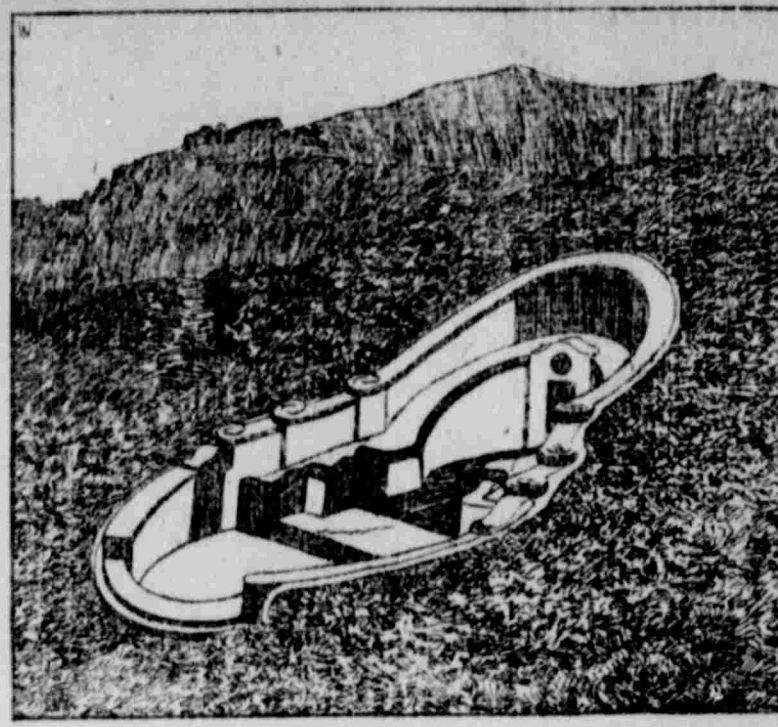

I. C. HATHARDSON.

You may have a sample bottle of this wonderful remedy, Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, sent absolutely free by mail, also a book telling all about Swamp-Root. You are already convinced that Swamp-Root is what you need, you can purchase the regular fifty-cent and one-dollar size bottles at the drug stores everywhere. Don't make any mistake, but remember the name, Swamp-Root, Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, and the address, Binghamton, N. Y., on every bottle.

successful as a grocer's clerk, as a grocer, a trader, and a politician. He bought and sold horses in the intervals of business, and made money even at that. He was an alderman in Troy and held other offices, and presently got himself sent to Congress and served two terms there, and could have kept on if he had chosen, but he preferred business. One gets a better notion of the quality of the man from reading about the first half of his life when he lived in Troy and was laying the foundations of his fortune than about the last half spent in New York, for he was already a rich man when he came to New York in 1863.

It was his misfortune that he learned so thoroughly to save money that he had not left in him the power to learn to spend it. That is one of the risks of forming early habits of thrift.—Harper's Weekly.

WHERE THE CELESTIAL RESTS IN PEACE.

The view given herewith shows a typical Chinese tomb, of which thousands are to be seen on the hillsides of the Celestial empire. The door of the vault in which the coffin is laid appears on the right of the picture. Ancestor worship, which is the religion of most of the Chinese races, makes the burial of the dead a very important matter.

It has long been conceded that one or the other would have to give way to gain any victory at the county convention, on the 20th, so they were both marshaling their forces for the primary.
