

Among the bodies found was that of a stranger. It was only slightly burned. Who he was or what he was doing in the mine no one seems to know. While he is believed to have been a miner who was visiting in the shaft at the time of the explosion, there is a possibility that he was a stranger, unaware of the danger in gaseous mines and that he may unwittingly have caused the explosion by lighting a match. At 10 o'clock today 23 bodies had been

"As worded the resolution was likely to continue the in-the present Congress. It was a conclusion has not been reached comes, it will be an easy matter continue hearings until all the construed to indicate that the com-quiry beyond the regular session of anged for that reason. If, however, by the time the summer recess to secure the consent of the senate to cessary information is obtained."

As he got them out, some one dropped from his head from a window above which knocked him senseless. When he recovered, his lady had returned to look for him, and got him out of the way of further trouble. Later, Mr. Slosson found that an entire family of seven with whom he was acquainted, were lost in the horror, and after searching the morgues all night, he finally located the seven in four morgues. As he told of this, Mr. Slosson broke down and went bitterly.

Dr. S.G. Paul testified that he dressed the wound on Burns' head, but could not say how it was caused. On cross examination he said it was possible that it had been caused by a bullet, but he could not say that it was at all probable.

James T. Fulton, Dr. Kaogh and K. Rowland, visited the well today. On account of the gas strike yesterday the drillers were not working, but will resume tomorrow morning. The strike was made at 350 feet depth.

A strong odor of gas fills the atmosphere around the derrick, and water was still bubbling above the surface several feet this morning.

bruised about hips.
Daniel O'Brien, New York, face skinned and bruised.
G. I. Williams, Benton Harbor, Michigan crushed.
Mrs. J. D. Aylor, Melbourne, Australia fractured.
That there was not great loss of life is due to the fact that Joe Pennington, the news agent, saw the approach of the local train and ran through the coaches warning the passengers to jump for their lives.