GOOD NATURE.

As welcome as sunshine
In every place
Is the beaming approach
Of a good-natured face.
As genial as sunshine,
Like warmth to impart,
Is a good-natured word,
From a good-natured heart.

BREVITIES.

Eight hundred barrels of beet sugar were made at Blackhawk, Wisconsin, last season.

Some one wants to know why an almanack is so rapidly thrown away. Because it comes in at one year and goes out at the other.

There is a bootblack brigade in Boston made up of girls. One of the rules of the association is that the young lady who shines for less than a dime does so at the penalty of losing her chignon.

Two of the Pittsburgh papers spell the name of their city "Pittsburg," and the other two spell it "Pittsburgh." Suppose, by way of compromise, they make it "Pittsburghg."

I have seen more vile and degraded women in England and America than I ever saw in any other part of the world, and I have never seen men more cruelly suspected than some of the English and American men.—Mrs. J. L. Adams.

In spite of Agassiz's prediction that the Falls of Niagara will yield out A. D. 12,571, the people there go on making preparations for the business of fleeing the sight-seers, the same as if the great attraction was to be a permanent thing.

If the ancients did anything mean, you find it recorded against them, even if he were prophet, priest or king. But in this age of whitewash, any man can be a glided funeral sermon and be canonized as a saint, if he only leaves enough money to pay those who undertake the job.—Mrs. J. L. Adams.

A teacher in an Illinois school district received the following excuse one day from an indignant parent: "Miss Brown, I want you to stop teaching that you have a son of mine. I have a son of mine, and I want you to stop teaching that you have a son of mine. I have a son of mine, and I want you to stop teaching that you have a son of mine."

The late Dr. M. Hall of England said: "I was seriously ill of consumption. I would live out doors day and night, except in rainy weather or mid-winter; then I would sleep in an open air log house. Phlegm has no nutriment, gasping for air cannot cure you; money capers in a gymnasium cannot cure you, and stimulants cannot cure you. What consumptive want is air, and not phlegm—pure air, not medicated air—plenty of meat and bread."

He who labors to diffuse competence and comfort amongst the many, instead of promoting the accumulation of vast fortunes in the hands of a few, seeks to confer on his fellow creatures the material gifts they are capable of receiving, while at the same time he lays a broad foundation on which to rear every moral and social virtue that can elevate and ennoble them.

At a marriage lately in Maine the bride's voice faltered, and she paused in the midst of the impressive ceremony. Her little niece, a bright little three-year old, thinking the naughty minister was compelling poor aunt to say something disagreeable, and that the correspondence was yet incomplete, and it would be impossible to produce it at present.

PAID. 21.—Emile, the Communist incendiary, and seven of the murderers of the Rue Haxo, have been convicted and condemned to death. Many others are being tried for similar crimes and sentenced to transportation.

Co-education of the Sexes.

President White, of Cornell University, who has heretofore given considerable attention to the subject of co-education of the sexes, has lately been visiting nearly all the colleges and universities in the country where the experiment has been tried, and has closed his tour of observation fully confirmed in the belief that the system may be adopted with safety, and with a fair prospect of extended usefulness. Mr. White cites the case of the academy and high school of the State of New York, in which young men and women of marriageable age have been educated together from time immemorial.

The first case of scandal, without the scenes of his own college life at Yale Haven, where the few lecture-rooms that were shared with young women were pleasant, and the few lecture-rooms that were shared with young women were pleasant, and the few lecture-rooms that were shared with young women were pleasant.

Jars, bottles, etc., and poured the contents into the street. For the distance of a block the gutter was swimming with whiskey, and the interiors of the saloons presented a scene of ruin that no seldom beholds in a community.

After completing the work they had set out to do, the ladies quietly returned to their homes. But they still express their determination to persevere in the temperance cause, and to repeat this performance whenever it may become necessary.—Missouri Democrat, March 2.

consist, Illinois, the uniform testimony was that the women fully equalled the men in their attainments in the different branches.

Prof. Wood, of civil engineering, in the Michigan University, has practiced offering a prize for the solution of a problem in the higher mathematics; for several years the problem has not been solved, but this year it was solved by a woman.

A gentleman who accompanied President White, and who proposes to bestow $250,000 on Cornell University as a fund for the education of women, thought the evidence showed that the women excelled the men in the powers of acquisition; but the President remarks that the young women were stunted out, while the young men were taken as they run. Several of the officers of the Western colleges, who had commenced the co-education of the sexes with many misgivings, have become favorably impressed by the practical working of the system.—Onida Circular.

Keeping Gold-Fish.

All gold-fish dealers say, "Feed the gold-fish nothing at all, they will derive their sustenance from the water."

A correspondent of the Rural New Yorker says: "I have kept gold-fish for two years or more. The first six months, or thereabouts, I lost eight fish by following instructions of parties from whom I purchased. I then thought I would use my own judgment in the matter and see if feeding would kill them, as I have been informed by the afore said dealer. I now have five gold-fish, three minnows, one craw-fish or crab and four turtles in an aquarium 30 by 16 inches and 12 inches deep. I have on the bottom about two inches of fine lake sand, and scattered here and there stones built up or piled so as to form runways.

I feed them about twice a week with fresh beef, cut into small pieces and dropped on the water, when, quick as a trout after a fly, they will seize the pieces and satisfy. I have often seen them jump three inches above the water trying to catch a fly on the side of the glass. I keep a small plant of the Calla species in a pot standing in the water all the time; some say it helps to keep the water pure. I change and renew the water twice a week during the summer, and three times during the summer. I find it is a great pleasure to sit and watch the fishes at all times, and would not part with my aquarium for anything."

Tropical and Semi-Tropical Fruits.

The pineapple has ripened at Los Angeles, the banana has survived a winter at Anaheim, and has now a beautiful crop of uniform fruit under its leaves. The coco-tree, coffee-shrub, and Africa sugarcane are growing at Santa Barbara, and the guava has ripened among the fogs of San Francisco. All these are considered strictly tropical plants.

The semi-tropical fruits are in full and profitable cultivation along the coast of California as far north as latitude 38°, and it has borne fruit at Los Angeles. The nopal, a gigantic cactus, bears a luscious fruit, in abundance. The fig is peculiarly abundant in California. The raisin-grapes, which refuse to ripen in France and Germany, come to full maturity here. The date varieties of prunes not only produce abundantly, but are free from any serious disease or troublesome insect. Our people have not yet had time to learn how to supply the markets with these articles in the best condition of preservation and transportation, but after a little more time and experience they will be prepared to compete with the shores of the Mediterranean in their most valuable products.—Wine Grower's Gazette.

FRIED OYSTERS IN A BOX.—Your correspondent took occasion to run down to Washington last week, and use that the affairs of the government were working smoothly. When we arrived at Baltimore a man entered the car and proclaimed:

"Nice fried oysters, smoking hot!" "What?" I asked inquiringly. "Hot fried oysters in a box, fried; twenty cents a box," continued the able vender.

Indeed, thought I, that's a new idea; wonder if they're good. "Here, my friend and brother," I exclaimed, "give us the oysters fried." He held up his basket and we took from it the boxes of fried oysters. "Have you any pepper and salt?" I asked.

"Find 'em in the box, sir!" "But I want some crackers, too." "All in the box, sir. Here's your nice fried oysters. Only a quarter a box." He vanished into the next car.

Then I examined the elephant I had on my hands. You have seen a French candy holding about a pound, haven't you? Well, these boxes of shell fish were just about the same size. In the bottom of the box—inside of course—was a layer of crackers, then came a layer of hot, fried oysters, and on the top of the oysters a nice sharp pickle, and a layer of box a little packet of salt and pepper. I would respectfully ask what could be nicer or more acceptable to a hungry person?

It is almost worth a journey to the monumental city to see the "fried oysters in a box." By the way, this practice of putting up oysters in boxes is getting to be quite popular, and the card of one of our down to a restaurant is "fried oysters in a box." "Take home a quail in a box," now has a new and sensible meaning for me.—Etc.

A CURE FOR SEA-SICKNESS.—An authority on this subject says: "I am convinced that the most reliable remedy is so prevalent, of the insensibility of sea-sickness. I believe the opinion to exist among us, in non-medical part of the community, from sheer ignorance, and among seafaring men, from a supineness to apply remedies—a fault to which they are rather too subject. In the greater number of instances I allow the stomach to discharge its contents once or twice, and then, if there is no organic disease, I give five drops of chloroform in a little water, and if necessary repeat the dose in five or six hours. The almost instant effect of the treatment, if coupled with a few simple precautions, is to cause an immediate sensation, as it were, of warmth in the stomach, accompanied by almost total relief of nausea and sickness, likewise curing the distressing headache, and causing a steady quiet sleep, from which the passenger awakes quite well.—Etc.
