THE LARGER OUTSIDE FILES

PROVO.

One of the most elaborate luncheons given in this city was in honor of Mr. Reed Smoot Thursday afternoon at the home of Senator and Mrs. Smoot, by their daughters, Misses Chloe and Annie K. Covers were laid for 12, the color scheme for the decorations being yellow. At the plate of each guest was a dainty basket of nasturtiums to which was fastened ribbon streamers, extending from a beautiful centerpiece. A most enjoyable afternoon was spent.

Mrs. David Vincent entertained at a family dinner Friday afternoon in honor of Mrs. Vincent's aunt, Mrs. Harry Atkinson of Salt Lake.

Mrs. Reed Smoot entertained at dinner Sunday afternoon in honor of her sister, Miss Mary J. Eldredge, who is to marry Mr. Lee Green Richards on Aug. 18, and will leave the day of their marriage for Paris. The guests were Mrs. C. A. Eldredge, Miss Mary J. Eldredge, Mrs. Genter and Mr. Richards of Salt Lake.

A very pleasant social was given Wednesday evening at the Sixth ward meetinghouse by the Forget-me-not and Merry Widow clubs. The hall was transformed into a pretty reception room. In one corner of the JUMPER PRINCESSE GOWNS SUGGEST THE MUCH-DISCUSSED SHEATH.

Although in some quarters the typically Directoire gowns are likely to be adopted, conservative women will favor modifications of this new mode. What they chiefly desire is the short waist line without the absolutely tight-fitting, clinging skirt. Some very stunning models of this kind have recently been developed in pongees and satin-surfaced cashmeres. Sometimes their skirts are absolutely plain; again they stimulate tunis draperies or they are elaborately Persian or soukache embroidered. The jumper bodice on which a skirt is built fits closely to the figure and is worn over a lace, chiffon or guimpe having elbow or mousquetaire sleeves.

WHITE LINGERIE FROCKS FOR SMALL MAIDENS.

When the little maiden of high society accepts an invitation to an afternoon party, or even to a very small and very early evening dance, she knows that the question of what frock shall be worn is readily decided. In fact, most of her elaborate costumes are of white embroidery. These are composed of extremely wide flouncings, of narrow ruffles joined to form both skirt and blouse, of allover or of handings. Sometimes applications, frillings and insertions of Valenciennes or cluny are added. These frocks are worn over white, pale rose, blue or mauve taffeta or lawn slips, and they always match the shade of the party sash, shoulder knots and hair ribbons.

room, rugs, rockers and couches were placed where the dancers might rest, in another corner a nook was neatly arranged and here a number of young ladies served refreshments. The evening was a social success.

The uninitiated who read the sensational newspapers firmly believe that the daughter of the rich has a private income that would support a dozen orphan asylums, and that she never wears a frock but once, and then only for half an hour, says Mrs. Osborn in the August Delineator.

On the contrary, it is quite a fad among the fashionable at present to put their daughters on a dress allowance—and not a large one, either—at a very early age. I have seen girls of 15 and 16 struggling with the problem of keeping within their incomes that promise well for the well-planned wardrobe of the next generation of American women.

They are very conscientious about it, too, these small business women in short skirts. The mother who instituted the allowance is only too often the weaker member of the contracting parties. It is an amusing reversal of old conditions to hear the daughter arguing economy and common sense.

"The mother, weakly, 'But really, darling, I think you ought to have it.' The child kindly but firmly, 'No, mother I do not need that pink pongee; my white linen is good enough.'"

It is quite a hobby of mine that you cannot begin too early to give a girl a sense of proportion, to develop her feeling of fitness of things in dress, to educate her taste as carefully as you would train her voice or her mind. She ought to be taught the beauty of completion when she is dressing her dolls, and discrimination of color when she is picking out her hair ribbons.

The mother who keeps her child's clothes entirely in her own hands until she has reached young womanhood is doing her a great injustice. A well-dressed woman isn't made in a day, and a fine discernment and discrimination in dress only comes with years of experience, during which the faculty of selection can be developed to a very high degree of perfection.

SQUARE TURNOVERS. Square Turnovers—To make these cut squares of good pastry. Make ready a filling by thickening a cupful of hot milk with three tablespoonfuls of flour wet to a paste with cold water. Let it boil for a minute, see that it is free from lumps, take from the fire and pour on three eggs, beaten well, with a half-cupful of powdered sugar. Return to the fire and stir to a thick, smooth cream. Flavor to taste. When cold put it by the spoonful in the middle of a square of the paste and fold the corners to the middle, pinching them together there. Bake a good brown and eat cold.

To make a rich and delicious peach ice-cream, pare and stone enough peaches to make a pint of pulp when pressed through a sieve. Add to this pulp one cupful of sugar, or more if the peaches need it, the juice of half a lemon, and one pint of rich cream. Freeze as any other ice cream, using three parts of cracked ice to one part of pulp.

For peach sherbet, pare and stone enough peaches to make a cupful and a half of pulp, add the juice of three oranges and one lemon, and a sirup made by boiling one quart of water and one pint of sugar for 20 minutes. Let the syrup cool before adding the fruit juice. Freeze the same as the peach ice-cream.

For peach shortcake, prepare a good dough with three cupfuls of flour, half a cupful of lard (or butter), three heaping teaspoonfuls of baking powder, half a teaspoonful of salt, a heaping tablespoonful of sugar, and enough milk to make it soft and kneadable. Roll into a round and bake in a jelly-cake tin. Have ready about two dozen ripe and mellow peaches, pared, sliced and mixed with sugar. When the shortcake is done, split it and butter both sides while it is hot. Lay one on the serving plate and cover with the peaches. Lay the other half of the shortcake on this and cover in turn with peaches. Sift a little powdered sugar over the top layer of peaches and send to table at once with either plain or whipped cream.
