There will be races Tuesday evening, however, and a most interesting event has been arranged for that date. Last night the Manager, Rishel, King, Lawson and Turville got together and after a long consultation entered into a contract for a 50-mile, three-cornered race, which will take place on Tuesday evening. The purse for the winner is $100, and the winner will receive a gold medal and a silver cup. The race will be run on the main track, and the winner will receive a gold medal and a silver cup. Probably Drowned.

New York, Sept. 7.—A special to the World from Niagara Falls says: Miss Wagerth is supposed to have swept through the whirlpool rapids in the barrel used by Carlisle D. Graham in his trips over the falls, and she probably met her death in the attempt. Miss Wagerth was seen in the barrel as she drifted in the rapids. She at once disappeared from view in the whirl of waters and the mist.

When night fell the barrel was supposed to be still in the whirlpool. It is feared the daring young woman is lost.

Best of Yacht Races.

London, Sept. 7.—The Field, in its issue today, says it thinks the race between the Shamrock II, and Columbia will be the most keenly contested in the entire American cup race, and it believes Sir Thomas Lipton has a fair chance of winning. The paper is inclined to think the odds should favor Columbia slightly, "because de won't fancy the form of the Watson boat will be found suited to the swell off Sandy Hook."

Big Athlete Meet.

New York, Sept. 7.—E. J. Wendell, chairman of the Harvard-Yale Joint committee; Thornton Jarvis, Harvard manager; and Oliver Livingston Duvall, assistant Yale manager, have about completed arrangements for the Cambridge-Oxford and Harvard-Yale athletic games on September 25. Mr. Wendell said that there are to be nine contests as follows:

110 yard dash, quarter mile run, half-mile run, one mile run, two miles run, 120 yards on cinders running high jump, running broad jump and throwing the hammer. In general, there will be only two entries on each side, but both of these may be from the same institution. An exception, however, may be made in the one and two mile runs, in which three entries may possibly be allowed from each side.

GOT HIS DESERTS.

Carpenter Said He Was Glad, and Was Punched.

An unfeeling carpenter was given a severe beating last evening after the announcement of President McKinley's shooting had been made, and the general feeling of those who witnessed the incident was that the fellow got his just deserts, and there were those who did not hesitate to say he should have been beaten within an inch of his life.

A teamster was going down the street when he came to a building. He was working on a building. He was working on a building. He was working on a building.

The main conduit of the underground system is already in on State street from First street to Third South, and the sub-conduits from State on South Temple, Third South, Second South and Third South are completed to West Temple, and in South Temple to Second West and Third South to Fifth West, the work is nearly completed. These sub-conduits will later be connected underground and then the private lines will be run from the rear of the business.

blocks and connected. Manager Murray expects the work to be completed within another year.

Much work is being done in the State. The line from Park City to Alta via Brighton's has been completed as has also the cut-off between Heber and Provo. This line will give direct communication in the Heber and Park City country with southern towns via Provo, instead of Salt Lake.

The gang at work on this Provo line has moved to Tintic to begin work on the Tintic-Nephi cut-off which will give direct communication from southern towns to Tintic instead of via Salt Lake.

The Marysville station will be in within three days, the line already being completed. The Kimbeler branch will next be built and within 60 days the Beaver line will be in.

The Point Lookout branch north of Brigham, is completed and work is now being done on a line to the Knudsen dock Camp at the mouth of Bear river. The Evanston line to Fort Bridger is completed and the line is being pushed to Lone Tree. This will afford direct communication from Salt Lake to the "Mormon" colony at Owen.

WHAT A MAN CARRIES.

Weight of Clothing Which He Lifts Around the Whole Time.

"Man carries a pretty good weight in these modern times, when you come to think of it," said a gentleman whose mind has an analytical turn, "and really it makes a fellow a trifle tired when he begins to enumerate the number of things he is forced to carry around with him. He is a beast of burden and is heavily laden. We will take him from the skin out and analyze the superfluities which hang about him and which are necessary at this time in the history of civilization in order to give him a polite standing in the community in which he lives, and in order to make him comfortable. One is almost inclined to shrink away from the fearful responsibility of carrying such a load, and yet one must do it if he is happy. Here are the two articles which stick closest to a man's back, and then we find pulled up around his shins and ankles two socks. He wears two shoes, unless he was in the war, and two strings are needed to lace them, or twelve buttons or more, if they are not lace shoes. He wears one top shirt, one collar and two cuffs. He wears one coat, one vest and one pair of trousers, and there are twelve buttons on his trousers, six generally on his coat and six on his vest. He carries two cuff buttons around with him, two collar buttons, three shirt buttons, two sleeve buttons and various other buttons on his undergarments. There is one buckle on his trousers and two on his suspenders. He generally wears suspenders. He wears two garters. He wears one necktie, or sometimes one cravat with one clasper to hold it in place.

"He carries one handkerchief in his pocket. He wears one hat. In the winter he must have two gloves and one overcoat, and may be two overcoats. But this is not all. He has a watch and a chain to carry around with him, a bundle of letters, a package of cards, a plug of a sack of tobacco, or may be a few cigars, a pipe perhaps, a pencil and a few other things which usually make up the pocket outfit, such as matches, buckeyes and other good luck symbols. He has a key in his pocket, and with hair in the soles and steel pegs in the heels thereof. There is silk or satin in his cravat or necktie. There is wool and cotton and linen and other things in the clothes he wears. There is straw in his hat. There is starch in his shirt. There is gold and silver and pewter and other metals in the watch and the chain he wears; there is brass and bone in some of his buttons. There are tin in his garter clasp and in the clasper which holds his cravat in place. There is glass over the face of his watch. Dye is used in staining his clothes—red, white, blue, black, purple, yellow, brown and almost every other tint. He has paper in his pockets. There is rubber in his suspenders and garters. Paint is found in the figures on the face of his watch, and polish is found on his shoes. There is a burden, a burden, and when he begins to count up the more than 100 superfluities he carries around with him, and the vast numbers of factories he represents, if the season is warm, with the thermometer ranging above the 100 mark, he will probably sweat a bit more on account of the vast load he is carrying."—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

THE VALUE OF SILENCE.

"I have the reputation of being reserved," said a well known Detroit business man with a smile. "I think that a lesson I learned in my early youth is responsible for most of it. I was born and brought up on a farm, living the so-called rube and easy life that the poets rave over. In my own case I cannot recall the first time I was asked to speak at a public gathering too much work for a small boy who knew where the old swimming hole was located and where the fish lay the best.

"Our cows were pastured in a back lot, and it was the duty of an older brother to take them there every morning and bring them home at night. But one day he chanced to be away, and my father brought up the question of going after them.

"Why not let Henry go?" said my mother.

"That meant me, and I was about to exhibit a painful smile and a good deal of my utter inability to attend to the matter, when my father, after looking me over critically, said doubtfully: 'I'm afraid he isn't big enough.'

"I be too!" I answered indignantly. "Well, son," said he, "you may try, but I fear it is too much for a small boy like you."

"Stone bruise or no stone bruise, I am certain that I broke the record that night in bringing the cows home, and I faced my father flushed and triumphant.

"There they are!" I cried exultantly. "Very well, son," my father answered, drily, "you may go after them every day hereafter."

"It was a long, long walk to that back pasture, and many a time while I walked did I reflect upon the danger of saying too much."—Detroit Free Press.

CAMP LAWTON IS MUCH GRIEVED

Assault on President Evokes Profound Regret and Indignation.

GOVERNOR'S DAY TODAY.

Large Crowd Accompanies State Executive and His Staff to Lagoon—Elephant Troupe of Seals Honored.

While there were large crowds and stirring scenes at Camp Lawton today there was a palpable feeling of restraint. The officers and the men showed that they were conscious all the time that the life of the President hangs in the balance and gloom was written in many of their faces. Governor Wells, shows by his countenance that the awful tragedy at Buffalo has moved him profoundly and his sympathies are so aroused that a slight word would cause the tears to burst their bounds and flow unreservedly. In fact he and his staff act like they deem it almost as a mockery to show signs of jubilation while the chief executive is lying so near to the grave. Despite all these conditions, however, the life of the camp goes on and today is the most interesting day of the encampment. The entire brigade passed in review before the Governor and his staff and a large crowd of visitors. A grand ball is the order of the evening and a train will leave Lagoon for the city at 10:30 to accommodate those who wish to remain late.

The camp was as usual yesterday with the exception of the battery and the signal corps, who went out to drill, the former to the lake, the latter to the mountains, and when they came back they were greeted with the startling news that the President had been shot. When that blighting news first reached camp the officers who first heard it gave a cry of horror and grief, which was succeeded by execrations upon the head of the assassin and his ilk, the emanated from strong hearts.

Aside from the word regarding the President's condition, yesterday's encampment was the retreat parade in the evening, a very imposing maneuver which was witnessed by scores of visitors. Perhaps some of the boys would say that the feature was the distribution of five wagon-loads of melons among the companies.

Yesterday's companies E, F, G and H held a battalion drill, in battle formation. Companies E and F were on the firing line and companies G and H acting as supports. The companies went through a series of maneuvers, including a retreat, a bayonet drill, and a battle formation in a very spirited manner.

At brigade review tonight, in which all the companies will participate, Governor Wells will receive and General Cannon will command.

The only thing that marred the drill last evening was the heavy wind which made it difficult for the officers to convey the commands to the men.

Musical Kammermen of company F has been appointed acting chief musician, to act in the absence of Chief Musician Christensen.

The people of Davis county have been highly delighted by General Cannon for their generous treatment of the boys in giving them fruit and showing their kindly feeling in other ways.

Company A of Nephi held an election this morning to fill the vacancy made by the recent resignation of First Lieutenant W. J. Brown. The honor went to Second Lieutenant J. A. Hyde, Jr., who is very popular with the men. First Sergeant George Lunt was elected Second Lieutenant. Major Sam A. King supervised the election.

Mrs. Stanford's Observations.

New York, Sept. 7.—Mrs. Leland Stanford, who has just returned to this country from a trip of fifteen months through Europe, Egypt and Palestine, has been studying the religious side of life in the east. In an interview last night she said:

"The degradation of women in Egypt, who are kept down in abject slavery, living in horrible filth, shadowed for me the grandeur of the temples, the glorious sunsets, the clear atmosphere and the natural beauties of that wonderful land. Only Christianity, I believe, will save that country and elevate its womanhood as it has other nations of the world."

When asked if she had any new plans for the Leland Stanford University, Mrs. Stanford said:

"For the university I desire that it shall be great, not in numbers, but so far as possible, in the mental development of its students. I want plans so broad that the men and women who go out from it shall make a mark for themselves in the world of men. Above all things, I do not want any student to receive a goldschied education. I desire that all shall realize to the fullest extent that they will be judged by their actions and lives, not by words. I am not in favor of any theological teaching of any kind, but simply of the beautiful precepts that our Savior gave to us when He lived on earth. This Christian influence will, of course, have to come from the professors."

Lawlessness in Guam.

New York, Sept. 7.—A United States soldier now serving on the Island of Guam writes to a friend in this city enclosing the copy of an order issued by Gov. Seaton Schroeder. The order reads in part as follows:

"The attention of the command of this station is directed to the hoodlums and lawlessness which are rampant. It is not necessary to mention all the instances of terrorism, theft, gambling and drunkenness which have brought the United States forces into disrepute among the people of the island, but there is reason for alluding to the theft a few weeks ago of a barrel of whiskey from the naval hospital that was the last and sole supply of the medical department for medical purposes. There are many who know who the thieves are but they apparently have not the courage to denounce them."

The order continues, calling upon the men to assist the officers in relieving the command from the charges.
