

A second reflection is that the Mormon vote was not lessened apparently by any "bolting" of the wives. The great Gentile argument for establishing woman suffrage in Utah was that the Mormonesses, who were secretly dis-gusted with the faith, would find in the ballots manages for their and and in the bailot a panacea for their lot and a way of escape out of it by overthrowing their rulers. Possibly this may yet prove true; but thus far such Mormon prove true; but thus far such Mormon women as have voted at all, and the proportion is very small, seem to have invariably sup-ported the straight Mormon ticket without "scratching." Possibly, among the vast majority who do not vote, some may refrain because they will not sustain the church ticket and dare not vote any other; possibly, also, were a decisive issue to be made against polygamy, some would take against polygamy, some would take courage to declare against it, who will not now incur suspicion and persecu-tion by voting for the Gentiles on less important issues. But both these suppositions seem to us rather forced, and the truth appears to be that the Morthe truth appears to be their husbands' mon women support their husbands' tickets out of free choice Hence wo-man suffrage is no more a cureall for Mormonism, a paracea for polygamy, than for sundry other fills to which the modern political doctors would apply it. The question arlass, when we see all the Mormon men, and all the Gen-tile women voting the ticket of the Gentile men, whether this is not a to-tile women voting the ticket of the Gentile men, whether this is not a to-Gentile men, whether this is not a to-ken of what may be expected every-where under woman suffrage. - Chicago Post.

THE canvass in Utah did not wind up with a grand riot. There was no riot in this city connected with the canvass, and the election passed off with entire pedition, says the health of all on board and the election passed on with entire peacefulness. The fact was that a number of demagogues called an open air political meeting, to which of course the public were free. The speak-ers made unwarrantable attacks upon ers made unwarrantable attacks upon some of the best and most respected members of the community. The au-dience did not relish such abuse, and The public did not relish such threat- proval.

may be the letter of the law and the strict construction of the courts, it is impossible to obtain an American jury to convict of murder in cases where the integrity of one's family has been violently assailed, or where the sanctity of the domestic circle has been ruthlessly invaded. The code duel-lo has been well nigh legislated out of ex-istence, but the rigor of the law is im-potent even yet when the honor of a wife is assailed by the tongone of shader public sailed by the tongue of slander, public opinion is invariably found in sympathy with the man who resents such a cowardly with the man who resents such a cowardly assault even to the taking of human life. Cases like that of Obey are of occasional occurrence, and popular sympathy is al-ways with the avenger of his private wrongs, while juries always render a verdict in accord with the popular sen-timent. The Prussian capitalists have made mistake quite as fatal and shortsighted as that of their workmen who are now on a strike. They have not only refused to discuss matters with their men. but have decided never to employ any man who has at anytime been on a strike. Striking is doubtless, in nine cases out of ten, a foolish and unrea-sonable method of carrying a point. But workmen are very human, and there are few who have not erred at some time in that way. The result at present in Prussia is to swell German emigration, and the employers are like-ly to have closed shops for lack of workmen.
