

famous lines of dedication to the Queen. The applause, whenever the virtues of Victoria were referred to, was throughout hearty.—Philadelphia Press, Oct. 26.

BREVITIES.

When you want friends is the time to find out if you have any.

For pure grit and tenacity of purpose, the aged couple in Indiana who got ruxious twenty years ago, and, though living together, haven't spoken to each other since, can undoubtedly "dance all round any other couple living."

An Irishman who was prosecutor in a case at law a while back was proceeding with his evidence, when the judge stopped him and said, "Pray do not speak so fast. I cannot take it down." Prosecutor replied, "I can't help it, my lord—I've got an impediment in my speech. I had it since I was born."

One of Charles Lamb's friends visiting him, with his wife and children, happened in the course of conversation to repeat the old saying, "One fool makes many."—"Ay, indeed," said Lamb merrily, pointing to the children, "you have a fine family."

A sneer is the weapon of the weak. Like other evil weapons, it is always cunningly ready to our hands, and there is more poison in the handle than in the point. But how many noble hearts have withered with its venomous stab, and fettered with its subtle malignity.

Kingsley says: "If you wish to be miserable you must think about yourself, about what you want, what you like, what respect people ought to pay you, and then to you nothing will be pure. You will spoil everything you touch; you will make sin and misery for yourself out of everything God sends you; you will be as wretched as you choose."

Dr. Hopkins, of Newport, called one day on a young man in his parish who had been some time out of health, and, after improving the occasion by some serious and condoling reflections, observed to him:

"Well, my young friend, it is now a long time since you were able to come to meeting with us; I think I must bring you one of my sermons and read it to you."

"Ah!" replied the reprobate, "I wish you would, Doctor, for I haven't had a wink of sleep for several days."

A gentleman about to travel on a French railroad had, at the time of entering the car, an unlighted cigar in his mouth. Observing that there was a lady in the compartment he was about to place the cigar in his case; when lo! from the lady's feet there rose a fierce dog, in a threatening attitude. At the same time the lady snatched the cigar from the gentleman's mouth and threw it out of the window, with the remark, "I dislike smokers, they make me ill." The gentleman, with a polite bow, replied: "I do not like dogs, they annoy me." Then seizing the animal by the back of the neck, he pitched him after the cigar.

A correspondent of the Practical Farmer says:

"I have known many men, and women too, who, from various causes, had become so much affected with nervousness that when they stretched out their hands they shook like aspen leaves on windy days; and by a daily moderate use of the blanched foot stalks of the celery leaves as a salad, they became as strong and steady in limbs as other people. I have known others so very nervous that the least annoyance put them in a state of agitation, who were in almost constant perplexity and fear, and who were effectually cured by a daily moderate use of blanched celery as a salad at mealtimes. I have known others cured by using celery for palpitation of the heart."

The Journal of Pharmacy thus describes a simple remedy for dandruff. "A preparation of one ounce of flour of sulphur and one quart of water was made. The clear liquid was poured off, after the mixture had been repeatedly agitated during an interval of a few hours, and the head was saturated with this every morning. In a few weeks every trace of dandruff had disappeared, the hair became soft and glossy, and now, after a discontinuance of the treatment for several months, there is no indication of the return of the disease. I do not pretend to explain the modus operandi of the treatment, for it is well known that sublimated sulphur is almost or wholly insoluble, and the liquid used was destitute of taste, smell or color. The effect speaks for itself."
