DO-NOTHING YOUNG LADIES.

At a recent social gathering a young lady informed me that she never sewed! What do you suppose was the nature of my reflections on hearing that declaration? I said to myself, either that girl speaks falsely, or else she is very lazy. Never sews! Who then, I queried, makes your dresses and cloaks, your skirts and bows? Who repairs the rips in your pretty gaiter-boots and darns the holes in your stockings? Is it your aged mother, or your more industrious sister? Or do you hire all your sewing done? Should this last supposition be the case, may you never marry, and the chances are you never will. Not one young man in a hundred can afford to marry a woman who habitually neglects household duties. Young man, if it should ever be your fortune to hear a woman declare that she never sews, beware, shun her, as you would the chills and fever. Be insane enough to make such an one your wife, and before the honeymoon is over the horrors of buttonless shirts and heelless hose will be upon you; your fair lady's sewing would be done by others, while she moped in idleness, or rioted in fashionable dissipation. Then farewell to your dreams of domestic felicity; they would fade as summer flowers at the touch of frost.

I have repeatedly heard ladies, educated and intelligent ladies, declare with actual pride, their ignorance of the art of cooking. "They could not make a cup of coffee to save their lives," and as to making a loaf of good bread or cooking a simple dinner, that is out of their power. Poor miserable unfortunates! Doubtless, mothers are much to blame for thus neglecting their daughters' education, but surely there is no sensible girl who could not, by the exercise of a little energy, perfect herself in this most needful branch of domestic knowledge. False pride, in almost every case, is the only barrier in the way.

It is not considered "genteel"—how I abominate that word!—to do anything useful, and a fashionable Miss would consider herself disgraced should she be seen with her hands in the dough, or caught in the act of sweeping a room. If a young lady of the present day can thump a piano, use a few French phrases, dance, flirt, and do nothing generally, her education is accomplished—she is considered "finished."—Aunt Susie.

A WASHINGTON paper reports that a Runic inscription has been discovered near the great Falls in the Potomac; that it records the death of an Icelandic woman, named Suasu, who died in 1021; that the discovery proves the visit of the Northmen to our shores five centuries before the time of Columbus, and that they made explorations inland. It is also stated that fragments of teeth, bronze trinkets, coins and other curious things have been exhumed from the grave.

A SUMMER RETREAT.

The Commercial Bulletin, in response to many anxious inquiries where to spend the summer, prints the following announcement from gentlemen eminent in the hotel and summer boarding business:

HIGHPRICE HOUSE,

GREENBACK FALLS, N. Y.,

Overcharge, Stickem & Co.,

Proprietors.

The proprietors of this palatial hotel, unequalled on the American continent for its enormous charges and inferior accommodations, respectfully announce that the house is now open for the discomfort and inconvenience of guests. The house has been refitted and renovated throughout on the Canal street plan (cheap and nasty.) The back yard has been enclosed by a new pine fence, elegantly frescoed, in whitewash, by the eminent artists in lime, Daub, Smearwell & Co., and a large and imposing woodpile has been built in the northeast corner, from plans furnished by the distinguished Greek architect; Mickell Itillie, Esq. A new and commodious pig-pen has also been added directly under the rear windows of the hotel, and furnished with a full chorus of strong-lunged, shrill-voiced swine, who will be fed and stirred up daily from 5 to 7 a.m. There is the strongest evidence already in rear apartments that this department will be highly successful.

Every sleeping room in the house is furnished with a washbowl, pitcher, and a bottle of bug poison; clean towel every Monday morning. Gentlemen can ring for anything they want, and the proprietors hope they may get it. A strong force of insolent Irish waiters, who have been discharged from the principal hotels in New York, have been engaged, and will be immediately reinforced by thick-headed bog-trotters direct from Castle Garden. Guests desiring seats at the table can easily obtain them by properly feeling the head waiter, Cheeky Bribe, Esq.

The office clerks have been selected from the brightest ornaments of that brilliant profession; they will be clad in the most expensive garments and gorgeous shirt fronts. The barber's shop will be reserved from 9 to 11 a.m., for their exclusive use; and their cluster diamond breastpins are warranted to be superior in size to those of any nigger minstrel in the country. These great creatures are each provided with a span of trotting horses, a terrier dog and a gold watch, have had a long and valuable experience in billiards, faro and draw poker, and any gentleman who has the stamps can be accommodated to a game on short notice. If they are not otherwise engaged in the billiard or bar-room, travelers will find one of these gentlemen in the office, who will not pay the least attention to their presence for half an hour after arrival; at which time he may condescend to direct him to the wash room, and tell them he will see what he can do for them in the way of a cot in the bowling alley, all the best rooms in the house being reserved for sporting men and barkeepers.

A body of muscular baggage-masters will be present on the arrival of the trains, and any gentleman getting his trunk to the hotel whole will please notify the proprietors, who would also call attention to the hackmen connect with the house, who cannot be equalled by any other body of blackguards north of the New York common council. Every driver is provided with brass knuckles, slung shot, and a choice assortment of oaths, with which he will speedily convince any passenger of his error who may be unwilling to submit to extortion. Guests receiving any attention from the employees of the house will please notify the proprietors. Hard-fisted porters will wake up the whole floor when any gentleman wishes to leave by the early train.
