

SALT LAKERS IN GOTHAM.

Annie Lockhart's Daughter Meets the "News" Correspondent—Bob Easton Meeting With Favor.

Special Correspondence.

New York, Oct. 5, 1901.—At the home of an artist the other day we had the pleasure of meeting the daughter of an actress well known in Salt Lake many years ago—Miss Annie Lockhart. In looks she resembles her mother somewhat, though smaller. She is now a widow. Her husband was stage manager at one time, in a Broadway theater. She has always kept her mother's name in the profession. She is a charming woman, and seemed very eager to hear anything concerning the artistic life of Miss Lockhart, for she was but a child living in California at the time of her mother's death. Her recollections of that dearly loved mother are all of the home and not the public life of the actress. She wanted to hear everything we could tell her in relation to the mannerisms and peculiarities of her acting—how she dressed, and how she walked and talked, until we were obliged to acknowledge we must draw on our imaginations if she asked any more questions. Many times she said to us the name Utah possessed a marvelous fascination for her, and any one from there seems very near to her. It was pathetic to hear her tell of the struggles of early childhood, brought up among strangers—of a frail constitution—life has been one long battle. She is just now recovering from a severe illness, and is seeking employment in some company. It is difficult for such as she to secure engagements. These schools of acting that turn out young and attractive women by the score each year, crowd out the older element—no matter what their merit, and Miss Lockhart is only one of many such cases you find everywhere, seeking the offices of dramatic agents, day after day, only to be told "every place is filled," or "you are not young enough for the part," or some other discouraging word, that makes them heart sick.

ing word, that makes them heart sick.

Mrs. Tracy Russell, with her two daughters, Mrs. Arthur Pryor, wife of the noted trombonist, and Mrs. Effie Heywood, are leaving New York for the autumn, to visit with relatives in Barnegat, New Jersey, and will remain until the last of December, when Mr. Pryor will return from Scotland with Sousa's band. Mrs. Russell's eldest daughter, Mrs. McIntyre, who has also been here with her family left for Salt Lake some time ago.

The out door meetings of the "Morning" are creating no end of talk; every pleasant evening, at 125th, 122nd and 124th street, New York, Bedford Ave. and Green streets Brooklyn, are to be found Elders, speaking to big crowds who listen respectfully, and with few interruptions. They are gaining each day, and more interest is being shown at present by the masses than has ever been known in this part of the Eastern Mission.

Col. Willard Young and family have moved from 81st and Boulevard, to 85th St. West End Avenue and Riverside. This city of flats and sharps, sees every body on the move, fall and spring, and the flat or apartment, is gradually solving the housekeeping difficulty, and smoothing out the servant problem. They are a great institution, and New York appreciates their advantages more every day.

Mrs. D. C. Dunbar arrived two weeks ago. She has decided to remain a year. Her oldest daughter Beth, will enter a boarding school. Mrs. Dunbar, with her youngest child, will board near her sister, Mrs. Willard Young.

At the Latter-day Saints' chapel in Brooklyn last Sunday there were present four or five boys from home, who have come to study, or engage in business for a while. Scott Groesbeck has been here since spring, and will in all probability remain for a year, as he is deep in the mysteries of a stock broker's office. Bayard Mendenhall of Springfield, who has been attending the Institute of Technology in Boston for three years and who will finish gets, is here to continue his studies at Columbia; Harold Orlow comes to dispose of his compositions, also to study, and Wilmark has accepted two of his compositions; Clyde Squires, whose talent for drawing is so well known at home, will attend the New York School of Art, and if he follows in the footsteps of the Utah boys and girls, who have preceded him, we will have another student to be proud of; he has two offers from publishing houses now, to illustrate, and will devote part of his time to that.

Mrs. Werner, who has been paying the Pan-American, Boston, and New York, brief visits, left for home a week ago. While in New York she was the guest of Mrs. Easton at the home of Hon. John W. Young.

Mrs. Neels, widow of the late John N. Neels, so well known in Salt Lake business circles, is living very quietly at the hotel St. George, Brooklyn Heights. From the windows of her room, she gets a fine panoramic view of the bridge, river and harbor. She has just returned from Saratoga, where her summer was passed with friends and relatives.

Mr. and Mrs. Willard Scowcroft of Ogden arrived several days ago, and they are combining a good amount of pleasure with business. Elders Nelson and Evans on their way to Europe, came with them.

The interior of the Manhattan Theater is out in a new dress, two beautiful shades of green. The exterior has also made the acquaintance of the paint brush. It is now Mrs. Fiske's Theater, and you feel it is here the moment you enter the foyer, even the programs suggest her, they are so dainty. It is aesthetic and artistic, even to the back row of the top circle. Her little play, "Miranda of the Balcony," which is so much talked about at present, and has found so few friends, will soon be shelved for a Biblical drama. It is easily understood why this new venture is not a success—there are only two characters of prominence in the play—Miranda (Mrs. Fiske) and Warrier, played by J. E. Dodson, and we may add a small part done by Max Fleman. It is heavy, and entirely devoid of humor. Mrs. Fiske is great in certain scenes—the second and last acts being best. Taken altogether it was a disappointment. But if the play lacked amusement a small portion of the audience found plenty. Is there anything more annoying than to sit by people who have seen the play, or read the book, and tell everyone within earshot in advance just what is going to happen. "Isn't she intense?" "She is saving herself for the last act." "Do you see that knife?" He will attempt to stab him, but he don't do it—Charmock is too quick for him." "I felt sure she would wear that black dress in this act, you know the book says she wears black and white religiously." "Oh, my, isn't she intense?" and so on, until you are in doubt which to listen to and vow in your heart you won't go to another theater for a year.

"Bob" Easton is here singing in Stoddard's production of "The Bonnie Brier Bush." They are playing to crowded houses every night. Of Mr. Easton's singing the Sun said "everything can be forgiven when one hears 'An ye'll take the high road and I'll take the low' by the tenor. His manager, Mr. LaSalle, insists on 'An' Laus' and 'Lech Lomond,' and wants nothing else."

JANET.

SAYS HE CAN TEMPER COPPER.

Machias, Me.—James H. Duffy, a civil war pensioner of this town, says that he has discovered the lost art of tempering copper that it will take and keep an edge equal to that of steel. Mr. Duffy lives on a small farm on the road from Machias to Gardner's lake. Fifteen years ago he set up a home, made a blacksmith shop, and has since spent most of his time experimenting with copper metal in various ways. About the time he set up his shop he noticed that there was a great waste of the soldering copper used in soldering the sardine tins in the factory at Machias. He thought that if two old coppers could be welded together into one good one it would be worth something, but to weld copper required heat, which spoiled the copper for soldering purposes.

He began experimenting, he says, with the result that a few years ago he surprised the factory owners by taking a load of cast-off soldering coppers back to them nicely welded together and proved that they were better than before, because the copper did not wear away so fast. He did not cease in his experiments. The result is, he says, that he has discovered the process which, if not the one by which the an-

Then don't expect to be cured in a minute! It takes a little time to get your blood pure and rich. We haven't room to explain. Just ask your doctor why Ayer's Sarsaparilla is such a good medicine for debility, weak nerves, and indigestion.

"I was very poorly and could hardly get about the house. Then I tried Ayer's Sarsaparilla, and only two bottles of it made me feel perfectly well."

clients tempered copper, at least does the same work. He has made and exhibited here a copper hatchet with an edge apparently as keen and strong as steel, also a stone chisel and several broadwords. The hatchet has been sent to the Pan-American exposition, and he is making a collection of samples to send to the same place. He asserts that his discovery is very simple and that every copper and brass worker treads upon it daily but fails to see it. He thinks that what he has discovered is but the beginning of a great series of discoveries which must follow it.

Saw Death Near.

"It often made my heart ache," writes L. C. Overstreet, of Elgin, Tenn. to hear my wife cough until it seemed her weak and sore lungs would collapse. Good doctors said she was as far gone with consumption that no medicine or earthly help could save her, but a friend recommended Dr. King's New Discovery and persistent use of this excellent medicine saved her life."
