

CARBON COUNTY ASKS FOR MILITIA

Governor Wells Appealed to To Send Troops Down to Helper
At Once.

SAY STRIKERS OUT OF CONTROL

Dr. Beatty and General John Q. Cannon
Leave for Scene to Investigate
Quarantine Conditions.

Carbon county has appealed to Governor Wells for the return of the national guard to the section occupied by "Mother" Jones and the turbulent strikers. The old woman has succeeded in violating several laws and is upheld in it by the men among whom she is carrying on her crusade of agitation.

"Mother" Jones was in quarantine at Helper. An armed mob of strikers took her out of the hands of the law and carried her to the Italian camp up the canyon. An effort to take her and two of the mob into custody was resisted by the armed force, numbering about 100, and the officers were forced to retire. Later, however, "Mother" Jones surrendered herself, and she is now in quarantine, but in the Italian camp.

OFFICIALS TO THE FRONT

It was this trouble that led to the appeal to Governor Wells for military aid, and at a conference held in the governor's office last night it was decided to send Secretary T. B. Beatty to the state board of health and General John Q. Cannon to Carbon county to investigate the situation. They left this morning upon that errand, and upon their report will depend the fate of the appeal.

The governor is very much opposed to ordering the guard out again—so is the guard—and says he will not do it unless it is absolutely necessary. But he will see that the laws are enforced, no matter at what cost. It is the opinion of the governor that the Utah Fuel company should control the situation with its armed guards, none of whom it is a company matter, exactly, but in view of the service rendered the company by the state.

STORY OF DISTURBANCE.

Telegrams from Helper to the executive committee of the board of health, Governor Wells received the following from Deputy Sheriff World:

"I made an attempt this morning to arrest Mother Jones, Sylvester Tedesco and Casare Antonio for having violated quarantine regulations at Helper. Found parties at strike headquarters between Helper and Castle Gate, and attempted to restrain from attempting the arrest by at least 100 armed strikers, nearly all of whom were Italian. Parties threatened to kill Dr. Beatty, the quarantine officer, and Sheriff Wilcox, neither of whom were present. All the rocks and prominent points are commanded by Italians armed with rifles. Parties promised me that they would surrender themselves to Helper this afternoon, but that the armed strikers would accompany them. An attempt to enforce the law means bloodshed. Sheriff Wilcox is in the mountains where he cannot be reached, but I desire emphatically to assure you that in my judgment bloodshed can be averted only by prompt action on the part of the state militia. The strikers were reinforced during the night by a mob of 100 armed Italians armed with shotguns who came up the road from Helper. An Italian mob consisting of about 100 men armed with shotguns and rifles, who went to strike camp and found more than 100 men bearing rifles and shotguns, who warned him that he must not attempt the service of his process. Parties afterwards promised sheriff that they would appear before the court this afternoon, but that they would be accompanied by the armed mob. Situation very serious. Prompt action on the part of the state militia will probably be necessary to prevent serious trouble. Under present circumstances I do not feel secure in attempting to carry out your instructions as to enforcement of quarantine."

FRY PREDICTS BLOODSHED.

County Attorney Fry sent the following:

"I have investigated the situation very carefully and know the information of Mr. World to be authentic, and I am in his suggestion that bloodshed can only be averted by prompt action on your part."

NEW BAND'S BIG HIT.

Prof. Pedersen's Utah State Band Anticipates Delights to Its Hearers.

A new and luminous star has appeared in the local musical firmament, a star that it is hoped has come to stay. It is the new Utah State band, and if the general public could only have had some appreciation of the fact that was coming, the entire body of the state militia would have been filled last night instead of a fraction thereof. There have been some remarkable musical performances in the area was one of the most remarkable of them all. It was especially so far the state band, who had not been before associated with the conductor, Prof. Pedersen, has mounted, wrought out, and perfected one of the most interesting and novel concert bands that has ever appeared in this part of the country; and all this has been done in the space of three or four months. In brief, it shows what noteworthy results can be achieved by intelligently directed instruction, and an intelligent and en-thus, the support. It is not "drawing a long bow" to say that the audience was treated to an immense surprise party, for that the name of the Utah State band will be mentioned after today in terms of respect and esteem. Another feature which also made the evening's entertainment was the fact that it was the first time that a concert band and the great organ had joined in a third factor, the general effect was masterful and overpowering.

The program as prepared by Prof. Pedersen was specially adapted to the evening's instrumentation, and of just the character calculated to bring out the best efforts of the performers. The band, unfortunately, was three clarinets short, because of the non-arrival from the east of low pitch instruments which had been ordered in time, but failed of arrival, owing to stupidity on the part of the Chicago firm in replying to the order. However, one player covered a high pitch A clarinet, hoping that it might do for a low pitch B flat, but Prof. Pedersen would take no chances, and the young man's hopes were blasted for the evening. The instrumentation of the band involved four cornets, four French horns, four side trombones, two euphoniums, three tubas, six clarinets, one oboe, two flutes, one bassoon, one stringed bass, tympani, and the drum and traps.

The ability of the band was effectually demonstrated in the first number, the "Overture." The horn work of Mr. Jespersen in this was of marvelous beauty both in expression and the fine quality of tone; no better exhibition of horn playing was ever heard in a local organization, and the same fine performance was noticeable through the concert. Then the baritone work of Mr. Daniels, and noticeably in the Faust number, was of that same high standard of excellence that distinguished the artist in the "Ray Blues" overture, and "Henry VIII Dances" given by Satriano's band during the Elks' band contest. The cornet work of Mr. Sharp, both in tone and smoothness of execution, deserved particular notice, the solo clarinetist showed himself an artist, and the bassoon playing of Mr. Evans added greatly to the laurels he has won in years past as a master of that difficult and often unsatisfactory instrument. The trombones, too, in the "Awakening of the Lion," performed in unison an entire strain that won them deserved recognition. The woodwinds were beautifully accurate in execution and clear, crisp and sweet in tone; in fact, as far as tone quality was concerned, it was apparent from the start that the conductor has made that something to be developed especially, and that he had been successful could not be doubted. Execution and expression were the next features to be brought out, and in these Prof. Pedersen had evidently been as happily successful. Then the band excelled in attack, precision and response to the baton of the conductor, so that he played upon the aggregation as the soloist plays upon his instrument. Drill, drill, drill, in all of the features of concert band work was noticed throughout the evening, recalling to the writer's mind how the Eighth Cavalry band of the Mexican army had practiced the "Cienfuegos" overture 50 times before performing it in public; and that band, too, is the crack musical organization of the republic.

The performance of Schubert's "Unfinished Symphony" deserves most favorable mention. Prof. Pedersen wrote the parts himself for the band, and his thorough knowledge of instrumentation was in decided evidence. The full value of every instrument was brought out and in proper places, and the thoroughness with which every musician had learned his part, enabled the conductor to give what must be the most perfect interpretation of the composition by a band of that size.

The march from Tannhauser, by band and organ, with McCallan at the console, was the greatest performance in ensemble instrumentation ever given west of St. Louis. What woodwinds the band lacked, the organ supplied; and the band furnished point, emphasis and brilliancy, while the organ made up massive background, deep and impressive, the effect being profound and inspiring. The same thing was again noted in the Damascene chorale, where the great body of vocalization from the choir was added to the organ and band. In some of the fortissimo passages, however, the voices seemed to lose their individuality, and were not noticed as voices, but rather as a melodious volume adding power and general effect to the band and organ. The audience will never forget that triple combination, and the thrilling sensations it produced. Prof. Stephens conducted the choir and choir ensemble numbers.

Miss Sigrid Pedersen sang two numbers to band accompaniment with her usual sweet and charming voice. It is always a pleasure to listen to Miss Pedersen, and the audience was greatly pleased. The Imperial Quartet sang two numbers in excellent voice and in happy unison and were well received. It was a delightful evening all round, and when Prof. Pedersen has secured a few more funds he will be in better condition than ever to continue in the pleasing work of further building up this fine band.

TOOK A BAD FALL.

Messenger Boy Meets With Painful
Accident at Ham Show Rehearsal.

John Youngberg, a 14-year-old messenger boy, fell down the steps leading to the smoking room in the Salt Lake Theater last night, and his hand was badly splintered. He had nerve enough to go on working, despite the severe pain he was enduring. Youngberg was delivering a telegram to Fisher S. Harris, who was working out in a rehearsal of the Press club's "Ham Show" on the stage. As he left the rehearsal, instead of going through the front office door, he bolted through the smoking room door, immediately tripped over a rug, and before he realized it had taken the fall.

Sarah Wolf Attempts to Commit Suicide in City Jail.

Sarah Wolf, a young girl who was arrested a few days ago on the charge of vagrancy and using abusive and obscene language on the streets, and whose trial is now pending before Judge Diehl, made an attempt to commit suicide in the city jail yesterday afternoon.

Shortly after being removed to the jail from the courtroom, she was discovered in the act of trying to strangle herself with a belt with a buckle taken away from her, but she secured some strings from her clothing, and again made an attempt to end her life. The officers then placed her hands in a "muff," used for the purpose of controlling insane persons.
