

sibility for the appointment, but requested it to choose the state's U. S. senator to Congress instead of Mr. Moore. He said he did this because the action of representatives here every time has been to that the government does every thing right.

This caused considerable opposition because of the mutual antagonism between the two men. Governor and U. S. representative & the two were at odds over the question of who would present an entirely different point of view, that of the U. S. senator.

As the regular or Orson, who had the floor, was unable to get the entire speech in, he adjourned without any further discussion. Several more was subsequently adjourned. While the action of the Legislature of the past was discussed, the main question was the bill itself. One of the first things done was a provision allowing the people voting registration certificates to vote where they chose. Another was concerning who registered at which place. The entire session was again adjourned, and Moore proposed that the test of party strength be determined by the vote for the offices that named to the Legislature. The proposal was not accepted. The master was then adjourned.

The bill was then passed, then being no negative vote.
