It is an exaggerated mushroom shape in leghorn straw and one of the first of the new big hats, a summer vogue for which is confidently intimated. The natural colored straw is used, with a mauve dotted chiffon scarf folded around the crown and ending with hat, while two big yellow roses each side of the front chiffon loops lend to the ensemble.

The material employed is seal-brown mohair with the gumpe emplacements of dark-brown silk that matches the color of the mohair perfectly. The slashed sides, as well as the coat fronts, are machine stitched. Velvet-covered buttons outline the sleeve seams and underarm gumpe pieces, and fasten the coat natty from bust to waist. The skirt is circular in cut, and trimmed with a single wide fold above the natty tailored hem.
