

RE-ARRANGING THE WEST.

Dividing It into Twenty-six States on Topographical Lines for Irrigation System Purposes.

The proposition to make a re-arrangement of the United States and of the Mexican river, recently advanced by the Washington City, D. C., Board of Geographical Names, is attracting considerable attention in the East, where it is considered to be the most important question that has arisen since the late war. The proposition is to divide the United States into twenty-six states, based on topographical lines, for irrigation system purposes.
