only being saved from death by the noble action of his cousin, Prince George of Greece. Should he finally conclude to go, the emperor would not assume active command of the troops, but would have an imperial headquarters, taking with him all the members of his military cabinet. Being on the spot, the emperor could more easily advise Gen. Kurupatkin in the event of any question of great military moment which he might desire to submit to his majesty. But, of course, the chief advantage would be the stimulus which the personal presence of the sovereign would have on the officers and men.

AD FOR BELLAGUED JAPS.

Seoul, Korea, May 11, 5 p. m. (Delayed in transmission.)—Infantry reinforcements reached the beleaguered Japanese troops at 5:30 o'clock on the evening of May 10. The garrison had fought fiercely for 12 hours, the men receiving their fire until the enemy was at close range upon each attempt to storm the gate. The Cosacks then retired over the eastern hills toward Yang Pyong, the provincial capital, leaving 60 killed and wounded on the field and one non-commissioned officer captured. The Japanese lost four killed and six wounded, besides one telegraph operator. The Japanese troops are now in pursuit of the enemy and an engagement is momentarily expected.

It is supposed that the Cosacks are part of the body which crossed the headwaters of the Yalu near Changsong and occupied Chingju, not knowing of the disaster which had attended their arms on the Yalu, continuing to carry out their order to harass the enemy and cut off his communications, which would now be impossible with even a much larger force.

New York, May 12.—An explanation of the explosion heard at Port Arthur which led to reports that the Russians were destroying their warships in that harbor is furnished in a World dispatch from St. Petersburg. It is to the effect that the garrison at Port Arthur is endeavoring to clear the harbor entrance of the stone ships sent in by the Japanese. In order to remove the obstructions divers are said to have been sent down, who placed charges of dynamite in position and succeeded in blowing away enough of the cement and rock cargoes to admit the passage of torpedo boats through the channel.

COPLEY TRAIN ROBBERY.

Evidence Against George Gates as Leader Accumulates.

Redding, Cal., May 12.—According to Detective William A. Horn, who has been at work in the Copley train robbery case since an hour after the commission of the crime, the trunk found in the room of Bruce Van Drake (Geo. Gates) at Dunsmuir, which Gates is charged with having destroyed, contained evidence that not only clearly established George Gates' connection with the Copley case, but held evidence that just as clearly showed that George Gates was the leader of the gang which held up several street cars in Portland and terrorized Seattle last summer. The evidence found in the trunk showing Gates' connection with the Northern street car hold-ups is a pair of his shoes. They are patent leathers with peculiar scallops where the uppers and soles of the shoes meet. At the time of the Portland-Seattle street car hold-ups it was remarked that the leader of the gang stood back and directed operations; that he was tall, erect and square-shouldered; a definition which the Oregon and Washington officers now realize fits George Gates, although they were then looking for a soldier as the leader of the gang. The pair of shoes had on them patent leather shoes with peculiar scallops similar to those found in George Gates' trunk at Dunsmuir since the Copley affair.

RUSSIANS FIRED FIRST.

Then Displayed a Red Cross Flag On Their Train.

London, May 12, 6:30 p. m.—The Japanese legation here this afternoon gave out an official telegram from the foreign office at Tokyo regarding the Russian charge that the Japanese on May 8 fired on a train from Port Arthur, flying the Red Cross flag.

It says the train did not carry any special marks until after the Russian soldiers had fired on the Japanese and the latter had responded. When the train stopped the Red Cross flag was hoisted and the Japanese immediately stopped firing and proceeded to examine it whereupon the train went on at full steam and speed.

The Japanese foreign office's telegram also said that while there is no reason to apprehend that China intends breaking the neutrality of the Japanese government, it is found it advisable to warn the Chinese government to observe strict neutrality.

BABCOCK TO DENVER.

Former Salt Lake Traffic Official May Go to the Midland.

The very latest rumor on Railroad Row is to the effect that S. H. Babcock, formerly traffic manager for the Rio Grande Western, is to succeed the late G. W. Kramer as vice president of the Colorado Midland, and possibly the Utah Fuel company. An effort to locate Mr. Babcock and secure a verification or denial of the story was to date unsuccessful. The story is based on the fact that Mr. Babcock arrived from Denver a couple of days ago and at once gave orders for his furniture to be packed and shipped to Denver, where he intends to make his future residence.

HE OBJECTS TO THE HAM SHOW.

Caustic Criticism of the Principals in the Production By Salt Lakers.

AN APPEAL TO THE PUBLIC.

Takes Umbrage at Desecration of the Masterpieces of William Shakespeare by Amateurs.

Extra help has been hired by the management of the Salt Lake theater for the purpose of handling the crowds which are anticipated at the opening of the box office for the sale of tickets for the Ham Show at 10 o'clock tomorrow morning. The announcement is made that none of the members of the Press club can engage seats for friends ahead of the opening of the sale, consequently it will be a case of first come first served and the early bird will get the best seat.

So as not to be accused of bias the following letter from an alleged newspaperman who evidently is angry because his name does not appear in the cast is cheerfully reproduced:

Editor News-Permit me to say who has ever entertained the most profound respect for the writing of William Shakespeare, deceased, to enter a most solemn protest against the desecration of his best work by the aggregation of incompetent and sentiment lacking amateurs, styling themselves the Press club of Salt Lake, which said desecration is billed to take place on Monday Tuesday at the Salt Lake Theater. I am credibly informed, my informant being no less a person than one of the alleged actors, that it is the intention of this bunch to stage a performance of the love story and anecdote of man's bravery, Romeo and Juliet; that some male is to attire himself as Juliet and murder all the beautiful passages attributed to the young woman created by the bard of Avon. As a matter of fact my informant states that John S. Critchlow is to assume that part. I regard this as nothing less than a farce. Imagine this course man, with a voice that sounds like filling on a piece of loose iron, repeating those lines where the love lord and disappointed Juliet says to the nurse: "I'll to my wedding bed," and the remainder of the extremely delicate and soul ravishing passage. Why, sir, if I were to attend the performance I would feel like shying a whole barrel full of bricks at the mal-constructed man who would butcher that exquisite passage. Think too, of a man of the kind and name of John S. Critchlow attempting the part of Romeo. Imagine him raving over the death of stout Mercutio and shouting out: "Away to heaven, respective lenity. And we eyed him by my conduct now."

Why, Mr. Editor, this man couldn't banish lenity to any old place, much less heaven, and as for fire eyed fury, I am sure he would not be able to attempt the part of Romeo. Imagine him raving over the death of stout Mercutio and shouting out: "Away to heaven, respective lenity. And we eyed him by my conduct now."

And we eyed him by my conduct now."

Why, Mr. Editor, this man couldn't banish lenity to any old place, much less heaven, and as for fire eyed fury, I am sure he would not be able to attempt the part of Romeo. Imagine him raving over the death of stout Mercutio and shouting out: "Away to heaven, respective lenity. And we eyed him by my conduct now."

I protest against any man of the mental caliber of this person, Tod Woodson, assuming the part of Ophelia. Who among you who has read the tender bit of poetry addressed by Ophelia to Hamlet, where she says: "And I a maid at your window to be your Valerius?"

could sit and listen without feelings of the most intensely repugnant disgust, or could hear the answer she puts in the mouth of the young man, without wanting to pull a sharp knife on the literary assassin's frame with copper pointed pellets?

Caesar's wife was presumed to be above suspicion, yet I am informed that Alaric, king of the Goths, in the part by assuming it. Sacrilege! Sacrilege! Then when a man thinks of the intellectual glamor with which Shakespeare surrounds Cassius, when one remembers the famous line, "He is the man," which Shakespeare placed in his thin body; when he recalls the signal ability which Cassius had in the swaying of men's minds; when he remembers the indomitable spirit which he had, to think of San King, who has nothing to recommend him for the part except a fragile frame and a dose of dyspepsia. There is no man in the theater who approaches any of the characters created by the divine writer of these dramas. Shakespeare never constructed a man like this chap Carpenter, who is a fairly decent reporter on some papers; Shakespeare never created a character that corresponds with Trilby Nicholson; Shakespeare never had an idea of a being in the part of the Fisher Harrier, because the attributes of such of the apprentices in the dramatic art. Imagine Shakespeare figuring out a mental monstrosity like the pudgy little fellow who is to be made a face of Hamlet.

As an admirer of the works of Dr. Conan Doyle, I seriously object to this fellow, who is a reporter, impersonating the memory of the great man, who is able to counterfeit the man in the elegant smoking act, and in the indulgence of that stuff we designate as "being in the part" in all the works of Dr. Doyle does he portray Holmes as being interperate in the use of these connections which take away the grey matter. Holmes had lucid intervals, according to the most eminent author. Then too this degradation of the brute creation by taking the dog "Beast" in to the show. I understand she is the only lady in the entire cast. Are the feelings of the audience to be thrown to the winds and she to be compelled to appear and undergo a metamorphosis? Because this innocent animal is to make a monkey of herself, as I understand it. The dog does not know what she is up against. Alone and unprotected, the only member of her sex to appear, I submit that it is too fair and if this theatrical plot is to be carried into execution, she ought at least have a chaperon.

I appeal to the people of this city to refrain from going deadhead. Let us reverse the memory of the great man, who gave us all the delights of Merry Wives of Windsor; let us refrain from desecrating the recollections of the creator of the biographical Macbeth and the valiant Macduff; let us set the seal of our disapproval upon those who would trifle with the works of the genius who gave us an Agamemnon, a Brutus, a Hamlet, an Ophelia, Rosalind the show. If you go display your contempt for the entire proceeding by either sitting in silence or yelling in derision. Above all let no man accept any passes. Pay your way and then when the show comes to hoot you can do so with a clear conscience. Yours for Shakespeare, C. M. JACKSON.

FUNERAL OF MRS. BUNNELL

Impressive Services Over the Remains Of a Faithful Woman.

Funeral services over the remains of Mrs. Esther Mendenhall Bunnell, whose death was announced in last night's "News," were held from the Fourteenth ward assembly hall this morning, commencing at 10:30 o'clock, Bishop George H. The casket was taken from her late home in the Constitution building by six pallbearers, sons and grandsons of the deceased, and conveyed to the hearse in which it was transported to the meetinghouse.

The services were largely attended by relatives and friends and there was a profusion of beautiful floral emblems, which, with the stand and pulpit decorated in white, presented a nice appearance and one in keeping with the solemnity of the occasion. Music was furnished by the ward choir which sang, as an opening hymn, "O My Father." Prayer was offered by Elder Thomas E. Taylor, after which Thomas Butler rendered the solo, "The Beautiful Isle of Somewhere."

Remarks eulogistic of the deceased and bearing on life, death and the immortality of the soul, were made by Elders Charles W. Penrose and Anna M. Cannon, while Bishop Taylor testified to the high character of the departed and of her faith and good works. As a closing hymn the choir rendered: "Rest for the weary soul," and the benediction was pronounced by Bishop Taylor. A long cortege followed the remains to the city cemetery where the grave was dedicated by Elder C. W. Penrose and where Bishop Taylor, in behalf of the family thanked all who had so kindly assisted during the illness, death and burial of the deceased.

INFORMATION WAS DEFECTIVE.

For This Reason Supreme Court Reverses Judgment in Case of State vs Davis and Pryor.

WERE CONVICTED OF ROBBERY.

Men Stole the Sum of $7.50 From John Daniels and Were Sentenced to 13 Years in State Prison.

The supreme court today rendered an opinion reversing the judgment of the lower court in the case of the State of Utah vs Ezra Davis and John Pryor. The following paragraph from the opinion is the basis of the decision of the court: "The phrase 'by means of force or fear' is a distinguishing feature between robbery and grand larceny when the taking is from the person and is a material element in the crime of robbery." The failure of the information to charge that the taking was by force or fear is held to be a fatal defect.

The two men were charged with robbing John Daniels of $7.50 on July 14, 1903, and were convicted and sentenced to 13 years in the state prison. An appeal was taken and it was contended by the attorneys for appellants that the information did not charge the crime of robbery as set out in the statutes for the reason that it did not charge that the money was taken from Daniels by force or fear. The case was argued on Tuesday and in the opinion today the court holds that the contention of appellants is good and reverses the judgment of the lower court. The opinion was written by Justice Bartch and concurred in by Chief Justice Daskin and Justice McCarty.

Official Information on Government Prices for Silk Cocoons.

The following information in regard to the purchase of silk cocoons and prices paid for same by the United States government has been received from the division of entomology, United States department of agriculture, Washington, D. C.:

"This division has been charged with an investigation of the possibilities of profitable silk culture in the United States. Since it has already been shown that cocoons of excellent quality can be raised in this country, the whole country (wherever the mulberry will grow), our first step is evidently to interest as many persons as possible in the cultivation of the silk worm in order that there may be a guaranteed supply of cocoons when the time comes for the establishment of silk reeling on a commercial basis. Therefore, to all persons willing to engage in silk culture and who do not possess the necessary food plants, the department will send mulberry cuttings in small numbers, and to those persons who already have the proper mulberry trees, we will send, in season, enough of the silkworm eggs for a good start. It is hoped that before long private enterprise will take up the matter of erecting silk reeling plants, thus creating a permanent market for the cocoons. In the meantime, so long as Congress appropriates for the purpose, we will buy the cocoons at approximately the current European market price, which is from 75 cents to $1 a pound for dried cocoons. We are operating a reel at this office in order to convert the cocoons into raw silk."
