A NAUSEOUS DOSE TO SWALLOW.

At the meeting of business men held on the 2nd inst., for the purpose of considering the advisability of organizing a Board of Trade in this city, the most conspicuous persons were aggressive politicians and representatives of the clique called the League. They were the speakers of the occasion. They figured in the purely commercial movement in which religion and politics were to be entwined. And yet they are blatant assailants of the religion and politics of the majority of the business men and people of this Territory.

And since that meeting, one at least of the chief speakers has been engaged in his work as a hired agitator, against the interests and persons with whom on Saturday he pretended to wish to fraternize to the exclusion of the questions which he is now occupied in discussing.

How much harmony can be expected in such heterogeneous cominglings of antagonistic forces and business men of this city want to work together for business purposes, all such plotters against the peace of the Territory and obstacles to its material interests, will necessarily have to withdraw or be removed from the organization. How can any man with self-respect fraternize and hold intimate relations with persons, who have deliberately plotted and labored with all their might to misrepresent him and to deprive him of them every political right that is valued by free men?

Through their efforts the wives, daughters, sisters and mothers of the business men were induced to help those agitators into influence and prosperity, have been deprived of the franchise and relegated to political serfdom, on a level with felons, idiots and lunatics. The Church to which the majority belong is, by the efforts of those modern individuals, exposed to spoliation and robbery. Transactions in real estate are hampered and obstructed and rendered in some cases impossible, through provisions forced upon the Territory by the efforts of these would-be boomers of local property for purposes of speculation. If they had gained their object, not a business man or other citizen in the Territory would have had voice or vote in the selection of officers to handle territorial and county business, but all would be political slaves and under the dictatorial thumb of the official who wants to figure, as the head of the band of which his intended victims are to form the chief constituent parts.

Business men who can swallow such nauseous doses in their eagerness to make money, cannot be credited with much delicacy of stomach or sentiment, or any very great respect for power or consistency. It will be said that we are opposed to business progress because we say at the mixture now proposed. But that is not so. We desire a solid and permanent prosperity of this city and Territory, and we know that it cannot be assured or promoted by an attempt at blending together such a heterogeneous and incongruous elements as now advocated for selfish ends, nor while the very worst enemies to business and other interests of the Territory operate as the chief cooks and bottle washers of the peculiar commercial fever least new being prepared. "Business is business" but there are some actual utility of interests between parties mutually engaged in it, or success is virtually impossible.

NEWSPAPER PORTRAITS.

It has become quite common in the newspapers of this country to present to the public alleged portraits of distinguished or notable persons. They are usually accompanied by a brief account of the chief incidents in the lives of the individuals supposed to be delineated, and the intention is, doubtless, to be accurate in both cases. But in most instances the accuracy of the press is more to be depended upon than the engraving, the whole attempt is usually deceptive and outrageous. Gentlemen of culture and prominence and ladies of beauty and refinement are pictured with mendacious features and a negro complexion, and often those acquainted with the person depicted are at a loss to recognize one familiar feature or well known expression.

We have recently seen what we consider a caricature of President George Q. Cannon in a country paper which we have no desire to ignore or speak of with disrespect. Small journals with incomplete facilities for printing, may be excused for deficiencies which would not be tolerated in larger sheets and more complete establishments. But there is no need to further disfigure their columns with rude and repulsive woodcuts that must be offensive to the persons they are supposed to represent. While the cut we specially mention bears some similarity of feature to the gentleman whose portrait it purports to be, the expression and general appearance presented in the rough imprint is almost in the nature of a libel on his pleasant countenance. It is referred to on another page of that paper as "The well-known picture" of President Cannon, and we have no doubt that the intention of the "artist" is to do the subject justice. But most of these "cheap and nasty" cuts are burlesques on engraving and fit only for office fuel.

We speak of this case in particular because we desire very much to see our public men who are highly respected by the community, thus misrepresented in our home papers, and with the hope that to other alleged portraits to be given to the public, they will not be calculated to carry impressions abroad of a character as unfavorable as many of these "things" undoubtedly convey. We consider a great liberty is taken with gentlemen of standing and position among us, when pictures claiming to be their portraits, which they could not look upon without a shudder, are printed in home papers supposed to be friendly to them.

Journalism, in our opinion, is not elevated or improved in any way by the common practice of giving place to the repulsive woodcuts which, in the lowest style of art, are furnished to publishers to give variety to their columns. Such things of horror are a woe forever.

GENERAL CONFERENCE.

FIRST DAY.

The Fifty-seventh General Annual Conference of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints convened in the Utah State Tabernacle at Provo, at 10 a.m., April 6th, 1887, Apostle Lorenzo Snow presiding.

There were present on the stand, of the Quorum of the Twelve Apostles: Lorenzo Snow, Franklin D. Richards, Heber J. Grant and John W. Taylor. Patriarch John Smith, several members of the Presiding Council of the Stake of Provo, A. O. Smoot, of Utah Stake, President Angus M. Cannon of the Salt Lake Stake, and many leading officials of various other stakes of Zion.

Conference was called to order by Apostle Lorenzo Snow.

The choir sang the hymn commencing: "Afflicted Saint, to Christ draw near! Thy Savior's gracious promise hear!"

The opening prayer was offered by Elder Angus M. Cannon.

God moves in a mysterious way, His wonders and His ways are strange, was sung by the choir.

ELDER JOHN W. TAYLOR was the first speaker. He said he desired by the aid of the Holy Spirit to say something appropriate to the circumstances of the people. Although the building was not sufficiently large to accommodate all the Saints who attended General Conference, it was an excellent structure, with admirable acoustical properties.

He related a conversation that had occurred between himself and a stranger in this part of the country. This person enquired of him (the speaker) whether he thought the late President of the United States, General Grant, would have the effect of entirely disrupting the Church. The answer was that the President of the United States would have the effect of entirely disrupting the Church. The answer was that the President of the United States would have the effect of entirely disrupting the Church.

The speaker asked the question whether the recent Congressional legislation against the Saints was not a good example of the kind of legislation that would be passed if the Saints were not present. He said he had been told that the Saints were not present, and he had been told that the Saints were not present.

He said he had been told that the Saints were not present, and he had been told that the Saints were not present. He said he had been told that the Saints were not present, and he had been told that the Saints were not present.
