direct. C. C. Anderson, a prominent merchant of Bolse, is quoted in Denver as saying:

"I contracted with a German firm for a carload of dolls for next season's trade. By having them shipped from Germany, I get what is called an 'im-port' freight rate of 80 cents per hun-dred from New York to Portland dred from New York to Portland. The regular rate from New York to Portland is $3 and from New York to Boise, 500 miles less, is $3.90. By getting the import rate of $0 cents to Portland, I can ship back from Port-land to Bolse at a cost of $1.50 per hundred, making the total freight cost to me, $2.30 per hundred instead of the regular rate of $3.90."

ting Ju Jitsu noids, and the contest immered down to practically a straight itch-as-catch-can match, with Robinson aving all the better of it. #### HOW ROBINSON WON.

Now ROBINSON WON. Once on the mat the American was more at ease. He kept after his opponent all the time and was the aggressor every minute of the time. Time after time hy struggled and twisted to turn the Jap on his back but each time failed until finally he secured a half Nelson and bar look and the disciple of Jiu Jitsu was slowly but surely turned over and his two shoul-ders forced to the max and held there. There was some great cheering when Dr. Plummer, the referee, gave Robinson the sign of victory in the first fail. Then the men came together for the second fail, many in the audience thought the Jap had something up his cleeve, so to speak, and they looked for Robinson to so hyng through the air, to hear him with pain. But they were mistaken.

was greatly enjoyed by those who wit-nessed it. The drill consisted of combination hose, engine and truck work, showing how couplings are made to fire plugs and how the hose is carried to the roof of a burning building. After this the usual pompler work was gone through, showing the speed and bravery of the men in scaling a building and rescuing persons in dan-ger of death by fire. The fire net was also brought into use, and some of the boys jumped from the windows into the net held by their comrades. Came in Fourth.
