FROM SATURDAY'S DAILY, JUNE 18.

Col. Torrey, Second regiment U. S. volunteer cavalry, has sent the names of J. Wash Young, Andrew J. Burt and Sidney K. Hooper to the war department at Washington for promotion. Under the appointment, Lieutenant Young becomes captain of troop I; Second Lieutenant Burt becomes first lieutenant, and Sergeant S. K. Hooper becomes second lieutenant. Archie McKay has been made sergeant-major of Mayor Harford's first squadron.

It will be sorrowful news to a host of Salt Lake people to know that "Late" Young, wife of Hyrum J. Young, is dead. The lady passed away at the family residence, 54 west Seventh South, at 4:10 a.m. today, after an illness from heart trouble covering a period of seven months. During the whole of that time she was a patient and uncomplaining sufferer. Everything that loving relatives and friends could do for her was done, but without avail.

The deceased was the daughter of James and Mary D. Currie. She was a native of Salt Lake City, and was in the thirtieth year of her age. She leaves a devoted husband and a wide circle of friends to mourn her demise.

The body of Frank Imlay, son of Joseph and Mary Imlay, was fished from the Jordan near the Copper Plant about 9 o'clock this morning. Just how the young man came to lose his life is not known beyond the fact that he was drowned. Frank was sixteen years of age, and yesterday morning crossed the river at Ninth North on a young horse. He was sent to deliver a message and on returning is supposed to have gone back via the same route he came, though it is suggested that he tried to ford the stream and went under. The saddle also came off the horse and was recovered today. The horse was found last night.

The remains of the deceased were taken to the undertaking parlors of Joseph William Taylor, where they are being prepared for interment. Funeral services will be held from the Sixteenth ward meeting house at 4 p.m. Sunday.

A sad and distressing death occurred in Mt. Pleasant on Saturday last, says the Pyramid, when a little five-year-old boy of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Candland of Chester succumbed to the effects of a large dose of tincture of belladonna, taken by the child at Chester the day previous.

It seems the unfortunate little fellow in company with his brothers, was playing in the barn at his father's place in Chester, and discovering the bottle containing the poisonous article on a high shelf in a dark corner of the barn where it had been placed for safe keeping, it was soon in the possession of the children. All of them claimed to have taken a taste of the poison, but the one little fellow took a second drink, swallowing a considerable amount. This was about 11 o'clock Friday morning and by 1 o'clock the inevitable spasms were on the child and he was soon in an unconscious condition. Everything was done that could be by the application of home remedies but without avail, and late in the evening the sufferer was brought to Mt. Pleasant to the residence of A. H. Maiben. Physicians were soon at hand and all possible efforts made to counteract the poison but without success and Saturday afternoon death claimed its victim.

The child was a bright, promising little fellow, and by his winning ways made himself a favorite with all. The remains were taken to Chester Sunday and interred there. The parents, who are almost distracted over the loss of their child, have the sympathy of the community.

FROM MONDAY'S DAILY, JUNE 20.

Brigham Bugler: For the past week the streets of Brigham have been alive with big loads of wool on their way to the Oregon Short Line railway station. Over a train load of wool has been shipped from here. Something like fifteen carloads of 24,000 pounds each have been loaded and shipped to various points. This amounts to nearly 400,000 pounds of wool. At fifteen cents a pound these shipments will bring into Boxelder county near $60,000. If White & Sons, of Salt Lake, whose extensive flocks are in the mountains east of Brigham, shear there and ship via Brigham, that will add a big increase to these figures.

FROM TUESDAY'S DAILY, JUNE 21.

Some time Saturday night burglars entered the stores of Arthur Frewin and John H. Timpson in the Sixteenth ward. From Frewin's they took a pair of trousers, a half-dozen silver knives and forks, a dozen teaspoons and a dozen tablespoons; also $2 in cash, which they took from the till. At Timpson's store they succeeded in getting $7 in cash and a revolver.

Malad, Ida., Enterprise: News comes to us from American Falls of the death of one of E. Craig's little children, a boy, aged about 6 years, by drowning in the Snake river, about ten miles above American Falls, last Monday. Mr. Craig's wife and Miss Maggie Taylor, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Taylor of this place. Twenty men for about two days have been trying to find the body, but up to 9 o'clock Wednesday morning the body had not been discovered. The accident occurred near Craig's house.

Graham, Ariz., Guardian: After more than two years' sickness, during which time his life has been almost despaired of on several occasions, in fact he has been so low at times that it seemed impossible for him to exist fifteen minutes longer, President C. Layton's wonderful vitality has again asserted itself and he left for Utah, accompanied by Mrs. Layton and his son Charles M. Layton, last Monday.

Several days before his departure President Layton telegraphed for a through parlor car, but received no response until about 3 o'clock the day he left. When the answer arrived it informed him that his car would be in readiness at Bowle Monday night, and that the company would put him at his home in Kaysville, Utah, without a change or delay. He immediately got out of bed, called Mrs. Layton and sent for his son to accompany him and inside of an hour was at the railroad ready to take the train for Bowle.

Richard Layton, who accompanied him as far as Bowle, informed us that he stood the trip that far splendidly, only that during the delay at Bowle he became very impatient, as he conceived the idea that someone was trying to prevent his going.

GLADSTONE'S HOME.

[Chicago Daily News.]

Both in ancient and modern history Hawarden is of interest. From the castle there are views of Shrewsbury, of the historic Dee, on which eight kings rowed, and besides the beautiful scenery and ruined castles in sight there are battle grounds, where the Welsh and the Lord Marches fought. After the conquest Hawarden was included in the grant of land given to Hugh Lupus, earl of Chester, and in 1337 it passed into the hands of the earl of Salisbury, and, reverting to the crown, was given to the duke of Clarence, Henry IV's second son, and in 1454 it came into the possession of Sir Thomas Stanley, afterward Lord Stanley, and for 200 years Hawarden remained in this family; but in 1653 it was seized upon and sold to Chief Justice Glynne. At the restoration an effort was made to recover Hawarden for the Stanley family, and a debate on the question took place in the House of Lords; but Hawarden remained in the possession of the Glynne family until the death of the last baronet (1874), when the lordship of the manor, by a family arrangement, passed to Mr. Gladstone's eldest son. It is thought that a fortified camp existed on the site of the ancient castle prior to the Norman conquest. The exact date of the castle is unknown, but it seems almost certain that it was erected during Henry II's reign, and probably added to in the beginning of the reign of Edward I.

In 1264 the castle was the scene of the memorable conference between Simon de Montfort and Llewelyn, prince of North Wales, in which a compact of mutual support was agreed upon, and subsequently was but poorly kept, for in 1281 Llewelyn turned traitor, and with David led the Welsh in a night attack on the castle, which they took, and in all probability burnt and left partially a ruin. The castle was some years later repaired by Robert de Montalt, and to him is the building of the keep, or donjon of the castle, attributed. The keep is circular, and is 61 feet in diameter. The base of the wall is about 15 feet thick, while it tapers to about 2 feet less at the rampart line, divided into two stories. The upper story was the state apartment of the castle, while the lower one was used as a store room. Adjoining the state apartment is the chapel, entered through a small doorway, with a pointed head. There is a small window between the chapel and the adjoining window recess, through which the consecration of the host could be seen.

The park comprises about 250 acres and is divided by a rivine, which passes the ancient castle. The village of Hawarden is a straggling one, and contains more acres than people, part of the land having been reclaimed at one time from the sea. The ancient house of correction, where the stocks were placed, still stands at the end of the village, a quiet, solid little building of Grecian architecture. The church dates back from about the thirteenth century and is in appearance solid with an air of dignity about its ancient walls. Past and present each contain interest for visitors to Hawarden; the old hills still lift their heads to catch the breeze of heaven; the Dee flows on as of old; the sun shines brightly as it shone in other times.

It is stated on the authority of B. L. Muir, a merchant of San Diego, Cal., that the proposed line of steamers to be operated between San Diego and Japan will be conducted by a corporation known as the California and Oriental company. The steamers are to be equal to any now on the Pacific. There will be at least one steamer per month under the contract for the next three years.

The board of supervisors of San Francisco has adopted a resolution calling upon Secretary of War Alger to provide an adequate water supply and sewer facilities for the Presidio reservation, as preliminary steps looking toward the concentration of all the troops at that place. It points out the unsanitary condition of Camp Merritt, and urges the necessity of removing the soldiers from their present location.
