Now that there is such a dearth in social affairs my lady has turned her attention to other less strenuous but 10 less interesting pursuits among which cooking may be named as the most popular. The cool summer has contributed not a little to the pleasratieness of the work and as the urableness of the work and as the main business of the housewife, now-adays is preparing toothsome lunches, a knowledge of the concoction of cainty dishes becomes a necessity. Cooking is a becoming occupation with all its paraphernalia of white dress, apron, rosy cheeks, ctc. Is there anything quite so fetching as a pretty girl preparing puff paste? There's nothing like it for the com-nlexion. plexion.

Numbers of Salt Lake women are taking lessons in nurses' cooking, candy making and catering these days. One well known woman, left a widow, recently took her initial les-son in candy making last Monday with a view to carning her own liv-ing. Let the good work go on.

Gov. and Mrs. John C. Cutler have invitations out for a large lawn party to be given at their home on July 25.

Miss Beatrice Walker Cheesman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Morton J. Cheesman and Lieut, Robert Nelson Campbell of the Twenty-ninth Infan-try, were married Thursday evening at $:30, Rev. C. E. Perkins performing the ceremony. The picturesque little church of St. Paul's has seldom been the scene of a prettier wedding. little church of St. Faults has scholin been the scene of a prettier wordling. the military accoutrements, large flags and loads of flowers forming striking and novel decorations. As the bridal party entered the church the sweet strains of the wedding march from Lohengrin were wafted on the air; as the ceremony proceed-ed other Wagnerian sirs were heard. The ushers, William Campbell, G. R. Walker, Lieut, Donald Robinson, Lieut, C. W. Mason and Wallace Predemeyer preceded the bridesmaids Yiss Eloise Sadler, Miss Pearl Van Cott and Miss Gertrude Hanson, Mrs. G. Raymond Walker, the bride and proom meeting at the chancel steps. The bride was gowned in white satin trimmed with real lace that was on her mother's wedding dress, the wed-ding veil and handkorchief beling also her mother's. She carried a shower her mother's wedding dress, the wed-ding veil and handkerchief being also her mother's. She carried a shower budget of bride's roses. All the bridesmaids' dresses were in pale blue empire style, with pale blue slippers and gloves, each carrying bouquets of deep red sweet peas. A reception fel-lowed at the home on Fourth South street, a supper being served for the members of the family and a number of intimate friends. The bride cut the bride's cake with the sword of the groom. Punch was served in the dining room, while Mrs. Louis S. Cates poured coffee, Lieut, and Mrs. Campbell left on the late traih for a short wedding trip. They will return to Sait Lake for a time then will leave for the Presidio where the lieutenant's regiment has been transferred.

THE SUNBONNET IS THE SUMMER GIRL'S FRIEND.

Of course the summer girl knows that her most fascinating and becoming headgear is her sunbonnet, a fluffy, fully, dainty thing of finest lawn and pret-ty laces. The poke is more than likely made over a foundation of fine crino-line stayed with featherbones, which can be removed when the bonnet goes to the laundry. The covering of this foundation may be plain, tucked or shirred or even inset with lace or embroidery bands, and the edge is finished with double lace edged pleatings of the lown. The poke narrows down to a couple of inches in the back, at which point the long tie strings are at-tached. The crown is a plain full puff. This pastoral headwear is particularly pretty with outing costumes of shirtwaist or jumper persuasion.

given by Miss Constance Perrett, the following guests being invited: The Mis-ses Lena Dell, Mabel Kelley, Isabel white, Anna Crowe, Bêta Tovey, Ethel Eite, Hilda Thomas, Mamie Shore and Owilda Carison. After a bath and a delicious supper the young ladies spent the evening in dancing.

THE SMARTEST BATHING SUITS ARE THE NEW PRINCESS MODELS.

A pleasing variation from the regulation bathing suit of combination bloomers and blouse and short full or gored skirt are the new princess models of this season. They are made in one piece and tucked or shirred at the waistline. Full bloomers of the same material may be worn, but tights are better; they fit the figure snugly and add nothing to the size of the hips, "hips in" being the fashionable command even on the bathing beach. Very soft black taffetas is the material of this shirred princess, the baby waist buttoned in the back and the yoke outlined with cream lace galloons. The round neck is finished with the lace, and the very short puff sleeve gathered into a band is also lace trimmed. The bather wears one of the new rubber bathing corsets, and the hem of her skirt is run with a light flexible featherbone cord which holds it out smartly after she emerges from the briny deep. White canvas bathing shoes extending halfway to the knee in the back, are laced up the front of the leg with black tapes; and the bathing cap of black taffetas is faced with creamy white silk of the same tone as the lace trimmings on the suit.
