Late and Interesting Developments in Sky Transportation.

TWO MODES OF AIR TRAVEL

The Experiments of Dr. Bell, John P. Holland, Prof. Langley and Others With the Kite and Bird Theory.

Special Correspondence.

Washington, June 22.—The activity just now being exhibited both in this country and abroad in aerial navigation ought to bring practical results, if such results are possible. There are two methods being followed by the inventors, each devoting no little mental energy and ingenuity and a considerable amount of money as well toward the development and perfection of devices with which man may travel through the air with safety and speed, but both working along different lines.

One of these schools, represented by such aeronauts as Santos-Dumont, the Lebaudy brothers and Professor Carl Myer, conducts its experiments upon the theory that the dirigible balloon will solve the problem of aerial navigation. The measure of success attending these experiments, which have been more spectacular than aviation, is pretty well known to the readers of the newspapers who are interested in the subject.

That the balloon air ship will work under certain conditions is beyond doubt. It has been amply proved by Santos-Dumont and the Lebaudy brothers, but whether it can be made to work in all conditions of wind and weather is a matter of doubt.

The other school of aerial navigators, to which belong such scientists as Professor S. P. Langley, Dr. Alexander Graham Bell and John P. Holland, maintains the theory that the dirigible balloon is unsatisfactory and impracticable and that experimenting with it is a waste of time. The theory is that the successful and practical air ship must displace the dirigible balloon, and the experiments are devoting all their mental energies to the development of the flying machine as against the floating device.

Among the most interesting and apparently most successful experiments with flying machines are those lately made by Dr. Bell, the inventor of the telephone. If all accounts are true, he has a flying machine that will fly. It is an ingenious structure, composed of what might be termed a multiplicity of silk wings upholding a sort of seat which is of the most remarkable buoyancy that is of any sort or kind. It is in the supporting part of the apparatus has been taken away. The machine is in effect an artificial bird constructed on the lines of a bird in accordance with entirely new ideas. It is, in fact, a multiple kite composed of a great number of triangular boxes of silk held in shape by sticks. One end of each box is open to the wind, the other sides being covered with silk and in shape and position suggesting the wings of a bird in the act of flying. Thus the whole apparatus, being made of such elastic material, is equivalent rather like a whole flock of birds whose flight is directed by a single impulse.

In describing his invention Dr. Bell says: "I have had the feeling that a properly constructed flying machine should be capable of being flown as a kite and, conversely, that a properly constructed kite should be capable of being flown as a flying machine. The machine is by its own propellers. Given a kite shaped as to be suitable for the body of a flying machine and so efficient that it will fly well in a good breeze or in a light breeze, it is a matter of time before it will be able to fly in calm air as a flying machine."

In one of Dr. Bell's experiments the machine was operated in a dead calm by attaching a box of a strong manila paper to a galloping horse. The horse, furnished to the apparatus a power of propulsion equivalent to that which an engine might have given, and it rose and soared beautifully. The application of the same principle as that employed by the small boy who when the breeze is too light to raise his kite runs with it along the ground.

Another experiment which has no faith in the dirigible balloon is John P. Holland, the inventor of the submarine torpedo boat. He says: "The solution of the problem of aerial navigation is much easier than that of a submarine traveling. The practical method of aerial navigation will be with wings. They will be constructed light, and men will strap them to their shoulders and propel them with their feet and arms."

Mr. Holland is now working on an apparatus which he believes will permit men to fly through the air like birds. At present his machine is a small one, but he believes that it is possible to make it large enough to carry several men. He has recently completed a small model of his invention and while experimenting with it found that several minor changes could be made that would materially improve the machine and make its working parts much lighter than they are at present. It is his intention as soon as he can find a place suitable for the work to build a full scale model.

It is a pity that some people cannot do a work with a few layers of whitewash. It is not always the most luscious fruits that hang on the top boughs. Those that fall off one's feet may be equally refreshing.

When a man achieves fame he should either die or be stricken dumb. Eye must have been real loneliness when Adam had no best friend to escort her around the garden. Think of a garden party, and only one man around. If a woman is too clever men think her a prig. If she is not at all so they think her a fool.

ACTED LIKE BRUTES.

The late John Sartain, the eminent engraver of Philadelphia, knew Edgar Allan Poe intimately. He was free to admit that Poe in his youth had been somewhat profligate, but always denied stoutly that in later life the poet was anything like the drunkard gossip points him.

"At the University of Virginia," Mr. Sartain once said, "Poe did not drink too much. In the middle of his freshman year there he gave a peach and honey party. Peach and honey was the drink of those days—a mixture of honey and peach brandy that was as overpowering as it was sweet and pleasant."

"Poe sat at the head of the table," Boys, he said to his guests, "shall we behave like men, or like brutes?"

"Like men, of course," a senior answered in a rebuking voice.

"Then," said Poe, "we'll all get drunk for it is something brutes never do."

CURED OF CHRONIC DIARRHOEA AFTER TEN YEARS OF SUFFERING.

"I wish to say a few words in praise of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy," says Mrs. Mattie Burge, of Marietta, Va. "I suffered from chronic diarrhoea for ten years, and during that time tried various medicines without obtaining any permanent relief. Last summer one of my children was taken with cholera, and I procured a bottle of this remedy. Only two doses were required to give her entire relief, and I then decided to try the medicine myself, and did so. In a few days I was cured, and well and I have never since been troubled with that complaint. One cannot say too much in favor of that wonderful medicine. This remedy is for sale by all druggists."

UP IN A BALLOON.

The latest cure for anemia is to go up in a balloon. If you come down after you get well. The proper thing is to have a tame balloon in your back yard and go up in it after breakfast each morning for a couple of hours. It is the latest cure for anemia, and is equal to three months in a health resort of the pure air breathed in the higher atmosphere.—Portland Oregonian.

ZION'S SAVINGS BANK & TRUST CO.

Notice to Depositors.—Notice is hereby given that a meeting of the Board of Directors of Zion's Savings Bank & Trust Company will be held on the 5th day of May, A. D. 1932, and also at a meeting on the 15th day of June, A. D. 1932, Article No. 16 of the By-Laws of Zion's Savings Bank & Trust Company, which reads as follows:

"As the deposits must be loaned out in order that the bank may be able to earn upon them, the Company will only undertake to repay depositors when there is a surplus of funds in the bank, and when the money on hand together with the estimated current income of the Company is sufficient to pay all the deposits applied for, they shall make no loan, and the Board of Directors in their judgment become excessive or general, they shall have power to set aside the money on hand and to order an apportionment of all the funds, as they may see fit, and to order the sums apportioned to each depositor, until called for by him."

For sums over $100.00 and not exceeding $250.00, sixty days.

For sums over $250.00, six months.

On all amounts exceeding $500.00, such longer notice as may be agreed to by the Board of Directors, the President or Cashier of the Bank. As a matter of indulgence, however, the Cashier of the Company may, without notice, make loans drawn without requiring such notice. In the event the depositor shall have applied for a loan making such application, the term of notice shall have expired, the application shall be considered as withdrawn.

When the money on hand together with the estimated current income of the Company is sufficient to pay all the deposits applied for, they shall make no loan, and the Board of Directors in their judgment become excessive or general, they shall have power to set aside the money on hand and to order an apportionment of all the funds, as they may see fit, and to order the sums apportioned to each depositor, until called for by him."
