

DESCENDANTS OF OLD BATTALION

Mormon Children of Soldiers Who Marched to Los Angeles Will Meet.

PLAN TO ERECT MONUMENT.

Committee to Be Named to Take the Work in Hand and Bring it On to Consummation.

To organize the descendants of the old-time "Mormon battalions," which marched overland from the Missouri river to San Diego and Los Angeles, Cal., is the object of a meeting to be held Tuesday evening next at the home of Mrs. Julia R. Farnsworth at 139 east South Temple street.

The "Daughters of the Mormon Battalion," an organization composed of descendants of the old-time band, has already been perfected, and it is now proposed to form an affiliated organization among the men who are descended from the same parents.

The Mormon battalion consisted of about 500 men, serving under general officers from the government. On company dropped out at Pueblo, being made up of the sick and disabled, who had proved unequal to the hard task of pushing on to California. After getting through Colorado, this company afterwards trailed the pioneers into Salt Lake, arriving two days later than the main band on July 24, 1847, while the rest had come on, passing through the Cajon pass into Los Angeles, and had raised the flag there July 4, 1847. For this service the command has never been given credit, on account of the hostility to the religious faith of those who participated.

Western history is particularly interwoven among the deeds of the members of this battalion, and much of it has never yet been put into lasting form, so that the battalion members could get the credit for what they did, and was discovered in California by a group of the discharged soldiers. The section around Monterey was settled by another group. Many of them remained in southern California, and joined the Mormon colony at San Bernardino, which was broken up when the Johnston's army episode occurred. San Diego as well as Los Angeles was taken by them from Mexico, and the American flag raised there for the first time. Two soldiers of the battalion came out from Los Angeles to the east to cut the flag pole on which the flag was raised, and Mr. Colton, after whom the town of Colton is named, still remembers seeing the log that was cut, how it was spliced and taken to town on mules to serve as the Fourth of July flag pole, when the emblem was formally raised.

In Utah the battalion members played an important part. The first man ever to cross the Sierras crossed from the west to the east, through a trick of fortune, and by the same trick the first wagon ever to cross the southwest desert from Los Angeles to Salt Lake came the same way.

Capt. Davis, who is remembered through the fact that Davis county is named after him, brought a wagon overland, in coming from Los Angeles to Salt Lake after leaving the Mormon battalion.

Many more were starting this way in the fall of 1847, but the fact that the food supply was very low, and that even the Church leaders had seen fit to go east for the winter, caused Brigham Young to send out messengers to them not to come, except in the case of those who had families needing their support. This defeated the trail of the returning boys to the north, along the western slope of the Sierras, and accounts for the wide geographical limits over which they roamed. Ogden city was bought with Spanish doubloons received from the government by Capt. Brown of the company which remained at Pueblo. He went overland from Salt Lake to San Francisco, passing the remains of the Donner party, to get his comrades his soldiers, and his portion he expended in buying the Goodyear brothers' claim on the Ogden flats. A monument has been erected over his grave in the Ogden cemetery, setting forth what he accomplished.

The object of the meeting Tuesday night is to form a committee of gentlemen selected from among all the descendants of the battalion members, whether they be in Weber county, in Davis county, in Los Angeles, in Stockton, or in Salt Lake.

One matter to be brought up will be the question of erecting a monument in honor of the battalion. Some support is already evidenced for this undertaking, and it will be more thoroughly discussed Tuesday. Mrs. Selden L. Clawson has arrangements for the meeting in charge, and is preparing an attractive program.

Seldom Wear Out

Dr. Miles' Anti-Pain Pills relieve pain—not only once, but as many times as it is necessary to take them. Many persons who suffer from chronic ailments find in them a source of great relief from the suffering which they would otherwise be compelled to endure. Their soothing influence upon the nerves strengthen rather than weaken them. For this reason they seldom lose their effectiveness.

I am 62 years old and have suffered for 22 years from nervous troubles, rheumatism and neuralgia, palpitation of the heart, shortness of breath, sleeplessness, and pain around the heart. The Dr. Miles' Anti-Pain Pills have been a blessing to me. I don't know what else I have been able to do, and they are the only remedy I have ever used that either did not wear out in use, or else the injurious results which I would be obliged to cease their use.
