THE MOB SPIRIT.

WHEN Jesus was taken before Pilate, the latter said, "I find no fault in this man." "But they (the Jews) cried, saying, Crucify him, crucify him. And he said unto them the third time, Why evil hath he done? I have found no cause of death in him." And they were instant with loud voices, requiring that he might be crucified. "And from thenceforth Pilate sought to release him; but the Jews cried out, saying, If thou let this man go, thou art not Cæsar's friend."

When Joseph Smith was basely assassinated while in prison under the pledged faith of the State of Illinois, the dark deed was done under the mobocratic decision that "if the law of the land could not reach him, powder and ball should."

The same wicked, mobocratic, base, cowardly, murderous spirit fires the hearts, loosens the tongues, and inspires the speech of some men now as it did in the days of Joseph Smith, and those of Jesus Christ before him. This is evident in the times of the late war, and in the times of things of which they are entirely innocent, and in speak of them in terms applicable only to persons who have been indubitably proved guilty before a competent tribunal.

In this same ferocious and wholly unjustifiable spirit the San Francisco Post says:

"Official law will not reach Brigham, martial law or lynch law should."

The Post knows that martial law and lynch law are no law at all. Martial law is the state of a man, right or wrong, and lynch law is simply the act of several men, right or wrong.

The Gold Hill News and some other papers talk in equally irrational, passionate, and wild strains, forgetting that it is infinitely easier to throw down the food-gates and let a stream of ungovernable violence loose upon society than it is to stay the reckless progress of that furious stream and shut it out again when it has done the work so foolishly desired.

Good citizens everywhere are forward to use their influence rather than to excite and irritate the wild and evil passions of men, and those who act in a contrary spirit are deeply and justly reprobated, and their names are a stain upon the commonwealth.

2000 RAILROAD TO THE MOUNTAIN PROPHESY.—The end of Mormonism, is once more foretold. The San Francisco Chronicle is the prophet and it prophesies that the "death-blow to Mormonism" is now being administered. "The church which stood so many shocks," etc., with its leader, "both are about to fall together. And the civilized world will shake its hands and cry, Amen."

We are aware that the civilized world, in its every day confessions, is not a bit better than it should be, but the rest of the fucuration of our California contemporaries do not altogether believe in it.

Information Wanted.—E. H. Hamerton, Union, Harden Co., Ky., desires to know the whereabouts of Eliza Gibbs, who came to this city, from St. Louis, between fifteen and eighteen years ago. The lady enquired for was formerly from Indiana, and married a man named Maria Holladay. Address as above.

New York, 27.—A correspondent at Omaha writes that a terrible storm broke over that city at midnight on Wednesday the 26th inst. At about 11 p.m. a heavy down-pour of rain began to fall, and at the same time, while the circumference of the horizon was fitfully illuminated by flashes of lightning, there was no thunder. Once only during the entire night was there one terrific clap of thunder, and that was when the storm was just over the city, gradually increasing in intensity, and became continuous. The entire atmosphere seemed to be in flames, and all this time there was not the slightest movement of the air in the street. About 11 o'clock small objects lying on the ground were blown up and whirled around as if by a cyclone, still there was no movement of air in the streets below. At midnight the tempest came, and the city was in a state of confusion. The wind was from the southwest, blowing in toward the basin of Lake Michigan. As it neared the city, it seemed to spread out into a fan-like form with a front sufficiently wide to embrace the entire city. It did not last much longer than ten minutes, and at the end of that time it was as if no army of besiegers could have wrecked it in the same space of time. The storm came in the shape of a compact mass of sheet ice, driven horizontally by the tempest blast. In the first blast every glass light in the streets, save here and there one spared by reason of a protecting roof, was smashed to atoms and extinguished; but the city was not in darkness for the masses of conflagrated buildings, which were now in flames, the lightning in a ghastly and ominous manner. The windows of manufactories and residences were forced from their frames, and besides having all the glass shattered, and bedrooms, staircases and saloons were thrown open to the storm, and in a minute or two were half filled with masses of debris far beyond the immediate power of the inhabitants to remove, for the storm was not over. The debris, that the hail stones or fragments compacted themselves into a solid mass as soon as they fell. In the city, the debris of many houses were absolutely beaten to powder, and stout partitions of wooden plank were pierced by holes, and the debris was blown by market blasts. Three persons were killed by the fall of a farm house in the immediate vicinity of the city. soon as the rumored suspension began to be circulated. It was at first hardly believed, but the truth, however, was soon made apparent by the closing of the doors of the great store on Nassau St. A large crowd of people soon collected, a majority of whom, however, were attracted by feelings of curiosity rather than interest. The suspension was everywhere the subject of talk, and most contradictory and absurd rumors were in circulation. Some stated attempts to gain admission to the building, but the doors remained obstinately closed.
