THE TRAGEDY IN IRELAND. THE brutal assassination of Lord lay in Ezyptian darkness, and not a ray of light was sent down from the Secretary Burke has thrilled the sky as though to call the City Counwhole world with horror and resentment. It is generally believed, and we think with good reason, that the Land-Leaguers and their friends who have kept up the agitation for some time for the emancipation of Ireland, had nothing directly to do with the crime which has been committed. The most feasible the committed. The most feasible the ory, in our opinion, is that Fenians plotted the death of Burke, who was an enemy to their cause, and in the execution of the murderous scheme Cavendish fell a victim to circumstances, his presence at the assassination of Burke rendering his murder necessary to the safety of the
