PIONEER OF LAS VEGAS RANCH.

Mrs. Helen J. Stewart Who Sold Out
Famous Oasis Tells of Its Features.

Mrs. Helen J. Stewart, the original owner of the Stewart ranch at Las Vegas, is visiting in the city with Mrs. Carmen. While conversing with the charming little lady it is hard to realize that she has been through the stirring incidents connected with pioneer days. "Mr. Stewart and I first went down to the ranch 23 years ago," said the little lady to the "News." "In those days the Santa Fe had not been built and we were practically out of civilization. Milford, our nearest point, was 350 miles away to the northeast. Mr. Stewart, who owned considerable cattle, wanted plenty of room, and so we settled there. I am glad that Senator Clark has made the old ranch, because he will make something out of it. It will make an ideal resort for invalids and is a veritable oasis. There are about 15,000 acres that can be utilized, and the water supply is abundant. The famous spring just comes gushing up out of the ground and goes foaming along between high banks that have been cut by the water. In three miles there is a drop of 180 feet in the stream, which at the spring is some 25 feet in width. Planking this river are cottonwoods, some of them 50 years or more in age. All kinds of fruit grow freely there and it is a charming spot, and especially so does it appear to the weary traveler after he has been out on the desert for some time."

Senator Clark paid Mrs. Stewart $55,000 for the property, and those who are considered judges of a good bargain say that the property is cheap at the price. Now that the railroad has reached this point and a townsite is to be laid out on the ranch, shops erected and division terminal established, the owners of the property will realize a fortune out of it.

The old ranch house, long-holed as it was originally built to stand off the attacks of Indians, is to be left standing, and will undoubtedly be a show place that will be depicted in the literature issued by the passenger department of the road. Here at present time grow figs, oranges, peaches, walnuts, grapes, peaches, and semi-tropical fruits, and as more water is developed the products of this fertile oasis will undoubtedly be sent to the Salt Lake market.

When the railroad is completed the traveler will leave Salt Lake in the evening and arrive at Las Vegas early the next morning.

BOMB SCENIC WONDERS.

While Las Vegas will be quite a feature to the tourist, and the Salt Lake route through the desert, which, to use a sporting phrase, will give the Rio Grande a run for its money. The famous San Bernardino arc, the Santa Ana concrete bridge, the largest structure of its kind in the world, together with the Devil's Playground, will all be strong advertising cards at the other end of the line. At this end there are Salt Lake, the Mecca of the tourist; the finest view of Great Salt Lake, as seen from the car windows on the Leaning Canyon cut-off. The Rainbow canyon through the Meadow valley wash, and the wonderful stalactites and stalagmites encountered in the mammoth caves in the vicinity of Pico. Then, too, there are the hot springs of Caliente, and the mining camps en route, all of which will be a veritable wonderland to the tourist.

The Rainbow canyon, which commences just over the Nevada state line, is justly named an account of the many and varied colored formations, and strata that go to make up the towering cliffs on either hand. In addition there are great caves that rise like mammoth cathedral spires at stated intervals. In the center of this canyon are several large bluffs, and in the vicinity of the bluffs are numerous Indian arrow heads, stone implements and devices distinctly reminiscent of the stone age. Among other discoveries of this sort was a stone finger ring, which is now in the collection of the state.

If ever a general passenger agent had a chance to spread himself on the attractions of a railroad, Mr. Gillett has that chance—once in a lifetime. It goes without saying that he will accept it. In fact already he has a corps of trained writers and photographers under contract to "cover" the system and turn in "copy" for the handsome advertising matter which is to be issued about the time the railroad is opened.

Judgment by stipulation in favor of defendants for $200 has been entered by Judge Stewart in the condemnation suit of the Rio Grande Western railway company against L. C. Crossman et al. The action was brought to condemn a right of way for the Rio Grande switch from the Bingham mine to Lark station. The expenditure of about $250,000 on improvements on the Colorado Midland is now said to be under contemplation by General Manager Valley. This road can be readily connected with the St. Paul system, and it will afford an outlet to the Northern Pacific coast.

HEAD CONSUL'S STATEMENT.

Says Modern Woodmen and Woodmen of the World Are Alike Respecting Politics.

(Special to the "News.")

Denver, Colo., Nov. 1.—Your editorial and letter published from Sullivan, state lecturer, and McGuire, district deputy of the Modern Woodmen of America, noticed by me. The attempt of said deputies to reflect on the good name of the Woodmen of the World, I prefer to ignore, only desiring to say that the two orders are on the best of terms, I receiving the other day 700,000 votes of the Modern Woodmen of America for president of the National Fraternal congress, and the chief executive of the Modern Woodmen of America respecting politics.

The political circular letter is as strongly denounced by this order as possible and the same is without authority and in violation of our principles. Respectfully, Myton on Montana Politics.

Maj. H. A. Myton has returned from a two months' absence in western Montana on business. He says "Toole" will undoubtedly be re-elected, as he is popular with all of the laboring classes, and that the Democratic ticket will be successful. Ex-Senator Lee Mantle is conducting the general Republican campaign.

JIM RILEY ARRAIGNED.

Alleged Saboteur Pleads Not Guilty Before Judge Lewis This Afternoon.

Riley, with several accomplices, blew open the safe in the office of the Continental Oil company, west second South street several nights ago, and was seized away by the night watchman at the Rio Grande depot before the safe was looted. In the chase which followed several shots were exchanged between the burglars and the watchman. Later Riley was taken into custody by the police officers, and some very strong evidence has been secured against him. Judge Lewis will appoint an attorney to represent the defendant later.
