UNIVERSITY.

Prof. Blanchard of the University of Chicago was a visitor at the University last Monday. He was conducted through the different departments by President Kingsbury and Professor Stewart. The University received some very flattering comments from him.

Mr. R. F. Hayward, chief engineer of the Utah Light and Power company, delivered a lecture before the engineers last Monday. He was conducted through the different departments by President Kingsbury and Professor Stewart. The University received some very flattering comments from him.

At the Normal society yesterday afternoon, Mr. Parker Pratt addressed the students, after which all the members indulged in a general discussion on the subject, "Should girls have the same chances in universities and colleges as men?"

Next Saturday, Jan. 19, is University day at the Art Exhibit in the hall of the Ladies' Literary club building. All the students have been encouraged to attend, and they will no doubt accept of the opportunity.

Most all of the students have returned to school. The compulsory vaccination will have but little effect on the average attendance.

Mr. Young will talk to the members of the Normal society next Friday on the subject, "The Old Teacher and the New."

SALT LAKE HIGH SCHOOL.

The attendance is increasing every day, and the High school is not seriously crippled on account of compulsory vaccination.

Supt. Cooper, Dr. Whitney, Mr. Brantling and Mr. B. S. Young were callers at the school this week.

Hon. C. E. Allen made an interesting talk to Mr. Travis' civil government classes Thursday.

Students and teachers are exerting all their energies to make the art exhibit at the Ladies' Literary club, Saturday, a success.

The Wednesday morning program was omitted this week. An interesting entertainment is promised for next Wednesday morning.

Miss Bertha Boden has just recovered from a serious attack of pneumonia and is again in her classes.

The High school is preparing to take part in the exercises of the coming stock convention.

William Case left a few days ago for San Francisco, to be gone about six weeks.

Prof. Snow of the L. D. S. College visited the French classes Thursday.

Beginning classes in first year work will be organized on the 28th inst.

Mrs. Jacob Bamberger has kindly presented the school a picture of Moses. The generous gift is highly appreciated.

Mr. Travis' civil government classes have issued a call for a county convention, to be held next Wednesday. This will probably be followed by a State convention.

The seniors have agreed on a class pin and will place their order early next week.

The school is under obligations to Mrs. Simon Bamberger for a most excellent portrait of Ralph Waldo Emerson. The interior of the High school is becoming more attractive each week.

Mr. H. L. A. Culmer, president of the Utah Art association, talked to the school Friday morning, explaining the processes employed in making the various kinds of pictures. His address was both interesting and instructive.

LATTER-DAY SAINTS' COLLEGE.

Among the visitors to the college last week were Acting President George H. Brimhall of the Brigham Young academy of Provo, and President W. J. Kerr of the Agricultural college at Logan. The latter inspected the new building and pronounced it a piece of fine work and a model of convenience within. He spoke especially of the fact that there was no waste space in the whole building, and that it was as trim and solid as any building could be.

The whole of the bookkeeping department was removed last week and today to the first story of the business college building. The bookkeepers' desks for 104 students, and the counters for minor offices, come very near filling the large room, and they make a fine appearance there. The school hall is now given over to the athletic association, and the basketball team are making much use of it.

It has been decided to remove the drawing from the Lion House and put it with the penmanship in the north room of the upper story of the new building. Prof. Stephens' music hall will likewise reside in the new hall on the top floor. The classes in art and music are the only ones of the high school and normal departments thus favored.

All branches of the business college were moved today into their new home, and the delight of the students is unbounded at the change. Bookkeeping, telegraphy and banking occupy the first floor; typewriting and shorthand, the second floor; penmanship and drawing, the third floor; office, toilet rooms, and the general assembly room, make up the remainder of the apartments.

The new assembly hall will seat comfortably more than 400 persons, and will be used hereafter for all general meetings among the students. The opera chairs are models of beauty, compactness, and strength. They are arranged in a semi-circle, facing an elegant speaker's stand on the north. Several Church organizations have already applied for the use of this beautiful hall for evening meetings.

The last carload of the new college furniture from the East arrived on Thursday, and the work of transferring has been going on at a lively rate ever since. On Monday everything will be in readiness for the complete occupation of the new building by the business college. All others, however, will remain in the Lion House for the remainder of the present year. The new house is just sufficient to accommodate, in an ample and comfortable manner, the various departments of the business college, so that no attempt will be made to crowd the high school and normal departments into that building.

More than thirty students entered this week, the majority of them registering in the business courses. The departments of bookkeeping, shorthand, and typewriting were about equally patronized.

It has been decided to hold a meeting for the formal opening and the dedication of the new building, in about three weeks. This affair will be under the auspices of the business college students, and promises to be one of the greatest occasions in the history of the college.

Next Monday evening Prof. Mills will lecture before the students and the associations of this city and county, in the college assembly hall, at 7:30 p. m. "The Nephite Records" is the subject of the lecture.

The officers of the M. L. A. for all the States of Zion represented in the conference tomorrow will meet on Sunday (tomorrow) evening in the college assembly hall at 6:30 p. m., by direction of the presidency of these organizations.

BEAVER BRANCH B. Y. A.

Beaver, Jan. 5.—The new century has come, bringing with it the beginning of another school year. Nearly all of the students have returned with a new determination to make even better use of the golden hours which are now placed before us.

Class A in psychology have completed their work in that study for this year.

These two weeks will be very busy ones for the students and teachers on account of the many examinations and reviews.

We are pleased to state that our principal's health has improved so much that he believes that he will be able to continue his work through this semester.

A few inches of snow fell Monday night. This is only the second snow storm we have had this year.

The first academy ball of the new century will be given in the concert hall next Friday evening.

ROCKEFELLER'S NEW HOME.

Classic Sleepy Hollow Will Become His Country Residence.

John D. Rockefeller, buyer of towns, absorber extraordinary of the acres of the earth, and purchaser in chief of all lands, estates and areas that might add to the magnitude and magnificence of his giant homestead—these are some of the characterizations which might be applied to the Napoleonic program of the Tarrytown millionaire. Rockefeller owns miles and miles of "home." He is still at work to increase his territory. Before he finishes he will own the present village of Pocantico Hills and all that is in it. He is the boldest operator in the land the real estate experts voted. When he wishes a front yard he buys up a few farms and sets an army of landscape gardeners to work.

A vast and comprehensive system of landscape reformation changed the face of that particular part of the country. But the millionaire did not stop there. He continued his quiet absorption of property in small and large parcels, just as it happened, farms, cottages and factories, through the agency of discreet real estate dealers, until now it is said the tract covers an area of some three miles and is still expanding and pushing into the Pocantico hills.

With the estate of his brother William adjoining on the north, the Rockefeller domain occupies upward of four miles of what may be called Hudson river front.

The property of John D. Rockefeller is a noble stretch of country, where nature appears in her loveliest aspects. It is believed that he has already spent half a million for improvements alone, and will spend as much more in beautifying the Pocantico region.

It is a semi-historic spot, almost on the brow of the grassy slopes of Sleepy Hollow.

The village is one of those sweet clusters of houses built on lawns and little strips of roadway that suddenly come to an end on a hilltop or in a dell—lost amid hedges and wild roses.

Sleepy Hollow is a most charming feature. It has been cleared of rubbish and put into parklike condition, with a pretty little schoolhouse and other buildings summing themselves under the brow of this swelling grassy dome of landscape.

On the other side down where the cumulative animal bumps should be located, are the massive stone stables being built. Higher up, on the bump of idealty, are some greenhouses and rose-aries, living art galleries and the like. Away down on the neck is the little hamlet of Pocantico, with its rows of poplars and evergreens disappearing and changing into lover lanes and hedged byways. It has a church, a blacksmith shop and a railway station of the Northern road, the Putnam division of the New York Central.

As this little village stands in the pathway of Mr. Rockefeller's growing improvements he is quietly buying up the town. The other day he purchased some of the cottages, one and two-story frame dwellings, also the village smithy, and the owners were glad to sell, too, for they got an advance on the price they originally asked.

To a Herald reporter the blacksmith said the "old man" was taking things at good figures and he didn't know why there should be any "kicking." The cottages brought more than they could ever have been sold for had the millionaires not happened to plant themselves at Tarrytown and make property in demand. Among other things they cottages and churches absorbed by Mr. Rockefeller's park is the famous monument to a good and faithful dog.

Mr. Rockefeller is an ideal family man. He prefers his home to any outside allurements. Neither society nor the splendors of the city have the fascination of this quiet home. There are many residences on the Hudson that are palaces beside this wide verandah dwelling. It is plainly a place of comfort.

The only evidence of what may be called lavish outlay of money for the richest man in the world is in the colossal scheme for buying up a town, rearing the houses, and turning the site into a big park—as regal as the dukes' lands, where the duke of Portland holds away in the lovely haunts of the British Hood land.

"I guess the old man will be buying up the hull gosh darned country," remarked a farmer-looking chap leading a cow to water.

"It seems kinder queer, tho', to be goin' back to deer hunting days. Now feller's manager will soon be leavin' and roarin' right whar I lived the church forty years ago in this 'ere village and elephants and all kinds of rich man's game before many year, I'm afraid."

"Well, why should I fear? If the old man's got the bee, and he can give us the cash, I'm willing. Only it does seem like going back to Daniel Boone days, this buying towns, postholes and churches and turning them into hunter parks for wild animals, hyenas and tigers, perhaps, to be roarin' over action by night and perhaps chewing up people by day, at least until they get shot full of gold bullets."

"Rally, as I told my wife the other day, I never knew the virtue of money. I see till I watch Rockefeller plantin' money in these hills and turnin' them into gardens of Eden full of hippopotamus and wild heliobores."—N. Y. Herald.
