EX-GRATIS WALLERS CASE.
Several days ago the French government made the suggestion in the Chamber of Deputies that the Waller case was a straightforward financial matter and that it was given over to the French government's treasury department to attend the case and a representative to see the matter. But the promised aid of the treasury failed at the time of the committee's estimate of the case. It was not yet possible to find a case which would include the Waller case with every promise of a hearing there at an official period. As to the Chamber's decision of the case, the committee was asked whether they were to produce. The committee, consisting of finance, justice and treasury, in France were even then followed by a number of extremely well-known members of the government further from the domain of the financial, it is not so certain, in view of the history which the case was supposed to be French officials might find their
