STEAMER EXCURSION ON THE LAKE.

On Saturday, May 11th, about three score gentlemen, with a sprinkling of ladies, enjoyed a very pleasant excursion on the steamer City of Corinne on the waters of the Great Salt Lake.

The previous (Friday) evening, it will be recollected, was exceedingly threatening, being windy, very cloudy and portending a morrow the reverse of the beautiful one which Saturday proved to be. Doubtless had the meteorological appearances been more promising on the eve of the day of excursion, many more would have indulged in the trip, the steamer being capable of accommodating not less than double the number of passengers carried on Saturday.

The party left the depot at Salt Lake City in the morning by the 8 o'clock train. An agreeable ride on the U. C. R. R. of upwards of 20 miles through the rich agricultural districts of Bountiful, Centerville, and Farmington, brought the party to Lake Side. The wide spread fields of grain, the scattered cottages, the neatly cultivated gardens, the verdure of the upspringing velvet grass and the beautifully promising orchards, beautiful with their extraordinary wealth of bloom, with the grand background of mountains, were a pleasant sight to see, and as one contemplated the cheering effects of cultivation in contrast with the general desert appearance of the surrounding landscape and recollected how so much of the country had been thus redeemed to beauty and manifest fertility, with so little help or possibility of extensive help from a distance, the thought involuntarily arose in the mind, that every man who had heroically come to this far off and unpromising region and cultivated the earth was fully entitled, in equity, to every foot of land which he had actually improved and made productive.

Arrived at Lake Side, vehicles were waiting to convey the excursionists to the landing place, a distance of about a mile, some of whom, however, by way of variety, preferred to walk and started forth with that intent, which they were glad to relinquish when they arrived at the marshy bottom land, as riding was certainly preferable to wading. Twenty or thirty dollars in labor would throw up a foot-path through this piece of marsh, so that parties who preferred to walk for the pleasure of the exercise thereof might do so without the inconvenience of wading their feet. If this point shall become a favorite one for a landing place, probably some time or other rails will be laid down from the U. C. R. R. to the bank of the Lake and a pile yard be built from the bank a hundred yards, or so far, may be necessary, into the Lake, so that unloading and disembarking may be as safe, convenient, and speedy as possible.

Coming down the beach near the Lake, the steamer, which had been sighted in the distance from the railway, appeared in full view, quietly riding at anchor near the shore. Not having seen her previously, we were agreeably surprised at her large proportions and handsome and trim appearance. It must not be supposed that she is little larger than a row-boat, for she is more like an ocean steamer, though not like an ocean steamer either. The City of Corinne is a stern-wheel steamer, 130 feet long by 22 feet beam, drawing about three feet of water. She has an engine deck, a cabin deck, and a baroness deck, so that she may be fairly called a three-decker. She has three cabins, carpeted and elegantly furnished, one of them fitted up as a bar, with clerk's office, etc. She has also cook's galley and other arrangements for the culinary department, with appropriate conveniences for gentlemen and lady passengers. She is fitted with Mississippi river, double smokestack, high pressure engine, of 100 horse-power. Going ten miles an hour, the paddle wheel, with only the floats dipping in the water, made 18 to 20 revolutions per minute. The steamer is owned by H. S. Jacobs & Co.

A temporary pier was out fifty feet or so into the water, whence the excursionists were conveyed, in her two row-boats, to the steamer.

Passengers and freight being all safely aboard, at about a quarter past ten the steamer weighed anchor, the stars and stripes at the mast-head spread out to the breeze, and the vessel headed for Antelope Island, westward about a dozen miles. Most of this distance the water is not deep and the speed made was about nine or ten miles an hour. Looking around now upon the steamer and rediscovering the excursionists variously engaged, according to individual fancy, exploring the different portions of the vessel, admiring the landscape or the water, etc. Among the gentlemen present were H. S. Jacobs, Esq., proprietor, Lake Wines, Esq., of the Enterprise Stage Co., Capt. J. A. Lawrence, of the Bureau Mining Co., C. L. Dahler, Esq., of the First National Bank, W. H. Bird, Esq., U. S. Deputy Collector of Internal Revenue, Wm. Stearns and R. Stevens, Esqrs., Iron Merchants of Pennsylvania, Major C. H. Hemphreys, Stephen De Wolf, Esq., and representatives of the city press. The Fourth Ward Brass and String Band ever and anon made the air vocal with national and other music.

Of course all, hand included, went on the hurricane deck early in the voyage to take in the general scope of the prospect. Hardly was the steamer out at sea, ere the terpsichorean music came with its voluptuous swell from the string band and a number of the excursionists, still on the hurricane deck, began to trip the light fantastic.

Nearing the island the steamer skirted the shore, coasting northward until half past 11 o'clock, when the north end of the island was reached. Here the steamer met the swell of the main portion of the Lake, a cool breeze blowing, that made overcoats, shawls, and cloaks decidedly acceptable. With the swell of the Lake the vessel began to roll slightly, causing the dancers to reel, bringing the salubrious exercise to an abrupt termination, and causing the musically inclined to assume a very sober countenance and to indulge in reflections upon the vanity of earthly pleasures generally and of the table specially. However, after half an hour of this, and while coasting on the west side of the island and within one or two hundred yards of the shore, though in deep water, all subsided into serenity and loveliness, and cheerfulness and good appetite prevailed, as was manifest by the way the excellent comforts provided for the inner man were disposed of by the excursionists universally.

Here the view was a striking one—the rugged island to the east, the broad expanse of the placid Lake northward and westward, extending in places as far as the eye could discover, with another island here or there in the distance, to diversify the scene, a brightly shining sun overhead, and music and dancing resumed, this time in the central cabin. The only signs of animal life outside the steamer were one or two homes on the island, a large number of gulls and a few wild ducks on the Lake. Otherwise, loneliness appeared to reign supreme on water and on land.

Thus we passed along southward, the valley of Tooele spread before us to the south-west, the west mountains in bold relief to the south, the Sand Ridge to the south-east, Mount Nebo's hoary head looming up in the distance, the Lone Peak and the Twin Peaks in nearer view, then the whole of the southern part of this valley, with Salt Lake City spreading out before us, and, as we rounded the southern point of the island, the cities of Bountiful, Centerville, Farmington, and Kayville, with our landing place at Lake Side, came again into the panoramic scope of view.

Our good steamer coasted northwardly along the east side of the island, passing within apparently a quarter of a mile of the Farm, the only strip of inhabited and cultivated land on the island. This was a pleasant relief to the barren monotony, the green grass and young grain, the fenced and ploughed fields, the blooming peach and other trees, the Farm house and appurtenances, signs of human habitation and industry, were especially inviting, contrasting agreeably with the almost universal desert-brown. There we should have been pleased to disembark for an hour or two, if it had been in the programme.

From the Farm and the water's edge to the mountains, the bench rises gradually and we could not help thinking that if by any combination of circumstances the island should ever be moderately inhabited, there would be a site for one of the handsomest cities on the continent or in the world. But also, although all around there was "water, water everywhere," on most parts of the island there "is not a drop to drink." To our citizens this is a fatal lack, although some persons would make nothing of it, provided certain other fluids were easily accessible.

Passing the Farm about half-past three o'clock, our good steamer began to leave the island and heading north-eastward our distance from it gradually but rapidly increased, and we soon found ourselves nearly on the course, returning, that we steamed over to the island in the morning. Nearer and nearer came the main eastern shore, with the Lake Side landing and the grove near by, the steamer gradually reducing her speed until near half past five, she again cast anchor, where we first saw her in the morning.

The boats were soon in requisition and the party were speedily and safely landed. The conveyances being in waiting, the excursionists in a brief space found themselves once more by the side of the railroad, waiting for the train. Half an hour was spent according to individual taste in racing, jumping, joking, laughing, resting or sauntering about, until the train came up at half past six, when everybody was aboard in a few minutes. An hour's ride per rail brought the party to the depot in this city as the shades of evening were closing around. The band on the platform played a parting air and the excursionists sought their respective homes, after a most agreeable day's voyage.

We understood the original intention was to steam from Lake Side to Lake Point, land there for a while, re-embark, and return to Lake Side. But this intention was relinquished in favor of a voyage clear round the island. The time occupied on the water was seven hours, the rate of steaming was stated at from nine to fourteen miles an hour, and the distance accomplished was variously estimated at from 60 to 80 miles, making with the railway ride a trip of 100 to 120 miles.

The day was most favorable, bright and lovely, neither too hot nor too cold, though not enough sometimes in the sun, and cold enough sometimes in the Lake breeze. Everybody appeared well pleased with the excursion. The dinner was of excellent material, choice viands skillfully cooked, and those for whom dinner was not sufficient could procure refreshments at other times on board.

Mr. Jacobs, proprietor, and projector and conductor, Mr. Evans, captain of the steamer, Mr. Thorne, steward, Mr. Adams, clerk, and all officially connected with the excursion were indefatigable in their courteous endeavors to please and to make the trip a success.

140,000 SINGER SEWING MACHINES

WERE SOLD WITHIN THE PAST YEAR. (Scientific American, June 10, 1911.)

The Singer Manufacturing Company

AT THE WORLD'S FAIR

—Constituted by the people for the people—

Received the Great Award of the Highest class and have left all rivals far behind them, for they Sold in 1870 127,833 Machines!

SEWING MACHINE SALES FOR 1870.

The "Singer" returns (to which any one can have access) of the manufacturers for the year 1870 the number of machines sold by each manufacturer in the following table:

The Singer 13,733
Singer & Wilson 8,324
Hewes 75,116
Grover & Baker 57,402
Wheeler 25,000
Willcox & Gibbs 25,000
American Sewing Machine 15,753
And several other companies who sold a few machines.

It will be seen by this table that the popularity of the Singer Machine far exceeds that of all others, their sales being one-half greater than even that of the famous "Wheeler & Wilson" machine. It is owing to the fact that the Singer Company have lately commenced making, besides their old and well-established manufacturing machine, what is known as their "New Family" machine, which is selling at the rate of nine to one over the other machines. Their total sales for the year 1870 were 127,833, showing an increase of one-half in the latter year. —New York Sun.

One-half of our Gigantic Sales, now nearly:

THREE-QUARTERS OF A MILLION

Machines Sold.

AND ALL IN PRACTICAL USE, WERE MADE WITHIN THE PAST THREE YEARS.

But the greatest increase of our sales over all other machines, being within the past year. This is an irrefragable proof that

Our Machines are the Best in the World!

The New Family Singer Sewing Machine.

With Attachments for All Kinds of Work.

It is fast winning supreme favor in the household, as shown by the rapidly increasing sales over all other machines.

The New Family Machine is now capable of a range and variety of work such as was only recently thought impossible to perform
