TROUBLE FOUND IN COAL MINES

State Inspector Reports to Governor Results of His Examinations.

REMEDIES BEEN ORDERED.

Electricity Must be Substituted for Daylight Which Does Not Penetrate Darkness.

J. E. Pettit, state mine inspector, filed his quarterly report Saturday with Gov. William Spry. His report consists of several letters which the inspectors had written to him on the conditions in the mines. There are several coal mining companies in the state operating ten mines.

The methods used in sprinkling and lighting are the chief matters discussed in the report. In the mines at Dragon this will have to be improved as much dust was found floating about. He called the attention of the owners to the law on this subject and demanded that it be lived up to in every respect. This mine is not lighted artificially, the daylight penetrating into the shaft which is 105 feet deep. If the shaft is sunk deeper, Mr. Pettit notified the owners that the mine would have to be lighted with electricity. The Utah Fuel company's mines were found to be in a good condition. In some of the mines, however, the inspectors found that the miners were using an inferior grade of coal, their lamps which were some of the rooms with lamp smoke. The ventilation in this mine was weak. In the Clear Creek mine the same condition except in some of the entries at No. 2 and on the sixth right entry of No. 4, where the ventilation was bad. At the Grass Creek mines the inspectors called attention to the dangerous practice of employees jumping on loaded trips and being hoisted up the slope. He suggested that this be stopped. This ventilation was good in these mines except in No. 2.

The miners have been careless in the Pleasant Valley mines, the inspector says, in using earth to tamp their shots. The powder cans are also left about the workings in a careless manner. The pillars in the Kentworth mines must be strengthened, Mr. Pettit says. In this mine he found a miner using dry coal drillings for tamping purposes. The Black Dragon mine he reported to be in a good condition. A new method of lighting has been introduced there in mining, and the owners have installed improved methods of lighting. The Weber mine at the manway was found to be dry and dusty. Besides this the mine was in a good condition.

RANCHER MATRICULATES.

His Tutition, However, is Returned Following Police Activity.

While waiting to meet his father in Salt Lake, Earl Turpin, a young rancher of Holbrook, Ida., learned a new game. He is now congratulating himself that it cost him considerable worry, instead of $130 which for a time he had put up as the tuition fee. Turpin was to have met his father at the Salt Lake Hotel, but he arrived there ahead of time. Two polite, kindly and sympathetic men seeing his loneliness took compassion on him, and incidentally his $130. They proposed a fine game to while away the time and they were careful to comply with the police regulations that there shall be no games of chance. Turpin never had a chance.

When the game was over and the $130 had changed hands, Turpin began thinking and finally told his troubles to the policeman. Detectives Currah and Ripley were detailed on the case and later arrested one of the pair, a young fellow who gave his name as Robert Young. Turpin's $130 was found in a bureau drawer of the rancher, while Young was put behind the bars.

A private safe may be rented in the Salt Lake Security & Trust Co., 32-34 Main street, $2.00 per year.

THE FOURTH AT THE POST.

Observance of the Day Marked by Official Ceremonies.

The troops at Fort Douglas enjoyed a vacation yesterday in addition to the usual Sunday relaxations and during the trip to Liberty park, are doing nothing today requiring any great exertion. Of course the boys in the "mill" have to be heard and cared for, no matter what the day may be, and seeing it was the "glorious Fourth," one of each year, there was no Sunday afternoon concert. The day was further celebrated by each company attending its mess room in competition. B company talking the prize in the shape of "honorable mention."

A special feature of the day was the unfurling of the great garrison flag, 20x36 feet in size, which is displayed only on national holidays and special occasions. It is quiet today at Fort Douglas with only A and M companies left behind for garrison duty, the other 10 companies being at Liberty park under the immediate command of Colonel Scott.
