Visits to Tilton's Renewed.

"Not very long afterwards Tilton asked me to his house, and said that he should be glad to have the good old times renewed. I do not remember whether I ever took a meal after that under his roof, but I certainly was invited by him to renew my visits as frequently as he desired. I was invited to dine with the family, and on one or twice

I went there soon after my reconciliation with Tilton. He was at his request particularly anxious that I should renew my visits to his house, and when he talked about his wife and me in a very gracious mood. He again began to tell me of his life as your people. The future seemed quite dark. After impressing his wife with his great patience, he

and showing it to me, would be just a drop, too much. I 1853 I came again into the same condition just before going to England, and was one of the reasons why I was wishing to go. The war was at its height. I carried my country in my heart. I had the Independent in charge, and was working zealously for the cause. I was very much depressed in mind, and all the more because it was one of those things that I could not say anything about. I
