

Iger C. D. Gates and City Salesman C. L. Headberg of the company were both at the office early in the afternoon and left Mr. Hinton at his desk writing to a former employe of the company. About 4 o'clock a pedestrian passing the office, noticed the body lying over the desk, and being unable to enter the building, called the attention of Pa-trolman Nick Gulbranson and W. H. Leaver to it. They secured a key and Leaver to it. They secured a key and on entering the door, found that life had been extinct for some time. There was no evidence of any struggie, or of any warning. Dr. E. D. Hammond and Dr. C. F. Pinkerton, who were called, igreed that heart failure had caused feath. The body was taken to Evans' undertaking parlors.

Informal Luncheon at Commercial Club in Honor of Visitors.

An informal luncheon was given at the Commercial club by that organization at 1 p. m. today in honor of Richard H. Little of Chicago, J. L. Steele of Kansas City and E. L. Barnes of Los Angeles, three members of the party of newspapermen who went through on the new limited train last week and returned yesterday. Present at the lunch which was served in the ladies' dining room were in addition to the guests named, Gus S. Holmes, Frank Knox, Capt. Joe Caine, Clem Schramm, Fred Scarff, John S. Critchlow and representatives from the four daily papers of Salt Lake. One of the features of the affair was the story of the White Horse as told by Mr. Little, This animal was loaned to him by John McCutcheon in the Philippines when Mr. Little accompanied a party on a flag-raising expedition. The story of how this quadruped drew the fire of the natives and how Listle and his steed were cast out by the indignant regulars served as a capping climax to a most enjoyable hour. After lunch the party adjourned to the Tabernacle, where they were entertained by Prof. McClellan at the organ.

AMUSEMENTS.

That Christmas is essentially a home day was more than ever evidenced by the attendance at all the matinees yesterday. The turnout was nowhere heavy, and in some places it was light to a degree that must have been disheartening to the actors. At night, however, the throngs poured out in a fashion that simply submerged all four of the amusement resorts. Figuring the seating capacity of the Salt Lake Theater at 1,400, the Orpheum at 1,300, the Grand 1,400, and the Lyric 1,100, and counting those who stood up everywhere, it is safe to say that over 5,000 people attended the several places of amusement last night, another sign that "Greater Salt Lake" is casting her shadow before.

A new house of mirth was opened in Salt Lake last night, and many there were at the christening. For weeks, if not months, the promise of the management was that its doors should swing in and its curtain roll up for the public on Christmas day. As time progressed, the doubting Thomases shook their heads and said it was an ownership wish that could hardly be gratified. But there was a pleasant surprise in store for these and other classes of the community last night when more than 1,300 persons crowded into the Orpheum to find it a handsome, operating reality, even if the sounds of saw and hammer bad just censed, and the odors of fresh-ly applied paints were still floating in the air-odors that damp walls would not permit to thoroughly dry before the first act was called.

first act was called. When the decorators and other arti-sans shall have completed their work of interior adornment the Orpheum will present, in all respects, a neat and ar-tistic appearance. Its long and bril-liantly illuminated entrance corridor, modern dressing rooms and uniformed attendants are features that theater patrons will appreciate. Its procession patrons will appreciate. Its orchestra, too, is certain to be popular. Its work last night was most excellent though occasional chasms were encountered too low in his tender moments. Mr. McVicker, another old friend, was the fiery and impetuous Messala to the life. Mr. McWade in the part of Simonides, has never been excelled by anyone who has attempted that role. Each one of the five ladies was excel-lent. Miss Mortimer in the role of Es-ther played with a sweatpass faste and ther, played with a sweetness, taste and care which, stamped her as an ac-tress of the most charming attainments, while Miss Morse as the mother of Ben Hur, Miss Robinson as his sister, Ben Hur, Miss Robinson as his sister, Miss Rossmore as Iras and Miss Weaver as Amrah, all filled their varying parts with strength and ability. The great spectacular features, notably the ap-pearance of the star of Bethlehem, the famous chariot race, and the grand scene of the waving palms where the moment of the Master is so fellingly.

presence of the Master is so tellingly suggested, with the full chorus and or-chestra, moved the audience to its chestra, moved the audience to its depth; nothing in fact that our stage has ever witnessed could surpass the deur and the uplifting influence of this last scene.

Audiences should remember that during the week the curtains rise precisely at 8 o'clock in the evening and 2 o'clock for the matinees. A great deal of an-noyance was caused last night by the late arrivals, and the first 20 minutes of the play were given in absolute disor-der on this account. The only two matinees will be Wednesday and Satur-

Last night's audience approached the $2,000 mark and though the occasion was a holiday, the management con-fidently expect to see the figures duplicated several times during the week.

It is seldom that the Grand theater houses a better play, as melodramas go, than "Honest Hearts." The setting is in old Kentucky, and while it has some features of the pastoral drama. the pale tints and low tones are not there, and instead there are thrilling moments and climaxes at very frequent intervals. They come naturally, how-ever, and carry the audience with them. even to the extent of drowning the lain's lines in hisses and applauding the heroine until she has to wait for a hearing. As a heroine, by the way, Misa hearing. As a heroine, by the way, and Alma Hearn does unusually well, and has a curtain call coming whenever it goes down with her on the stage. The company as a whole is good, although there are a few roles that could be improved upon. "Honest Hearts" re-mains the bill until Wednesday evening, with the usual midweek matinee.

THE HAY FEVER GRAFTER.

Prof. Garner, who is about to return to Africa to resume, in his steel cage, the study of the language of monkeys complained bitterly on his last visit to New York about grafters. "Some so-called journalists," he said, when they can't get an interview with me-and why should I give away my their form and sell them as actual in-terviews at from $5 to $8 a column. That is graft, or worse than graft. "But I need not complain, for graft is everywhere. "I know a man who suffers greatly from hay fever in September. He went to his brother, a famous physician, and said: " Where do you advise me to go this month to keep the hay fever down?" The doctor, laughing, frankly replied

"'I don't know. The fact is, I haven't completed my arrangements with any of the free-from-hay-fever resorts yet."
