Terrible Hail Storms.

CONSTERNATION AMONG THE PEOPLE .- On Friday afternoon of week before last, there appears to have been a terrible hailstorm in different parts of this State and Minnesota. At Mantorville, in Dodge Co., Minnesota, the heavens were fearfully black just before the storm. The average width of the storm was four or five miles. It was such a visitation as has never before been known there. After the first dash of hail there fell genuine cakes of ice of the greatest density, hundreds of which measured ten inches in circumference, and weighed from half to three-quarters of a pound each. A great part of the stones were of this size during the entire storm, which lasted about fifteen minutes: -- [Weekly Wisconsin, August 18.

The effect of such a storm cannot be fully described. As it approached, men, women and children retreated for safety. Horses and cattle ran wildly through the streets, seeking protection and shelter. The wind driving with violence from the north-west, the stones were dashed thro' the windows of every house having any exposed. Nearly all the glass on the north side of all the buildings in town was broken out, and a large quantity on the west. One hundred and fortyfive panes were broken in the Hubbell House alone.

But not only glass and sash were thus mercilessly shivered, but in many places the stones were forced through the roofs of the houses .-Young pigs and chickens were laid out, and cattle most unmercifully bruised. At Concord the house of Mr. Pyle was unroofed by the wind .-The crops in many places over which the storm passed, are completely ruined. In other places the damage was less severe. As yet we can make no estimate of the entire amount of damage done. But passing as it did over a densely settled and well improved portion of our country, it must be great. Many individual farmers have lost nearly their entire crops. We have heard it stated that there were stones which fell in the storm which measured 12 inches in circumference, and weighed one pound each, and we have no reason to doubt the truth of it.

ENORMOUS HAILSTONES .-- The Belle Plain (Minn.) Enquirer gives an account of a hail storm up there a week ago Friday, in which it says some hail-stones fell that measured eighteen inches. It is a good large story, but it says one measured that after being brought two miles to their office. It adds this of one piece, or stone: - [Ibid.

As it came from the heavens it must have measured at least 20 inches. Several other hailstones that we saw, were a foot and upwards around. They were all as clear as crystal. So thick and of such large stones did the hail lie on the Prairie, that many persons gathered it to cool water and for other domestic purposes.

TERRIBLE STORM IN WAUPACCA, WIS .- A week ago Tuesday there was a terrible thunder storm in Waupacca, accompanied with hail, which lasted about half an hour. The Waupacca Register learn that barns were removed by it, fences were blown down, trees were torn up by the roots. The hail destroyed 30 acres of C. O. Brown's wheat in Farmington, and D. Luce's house, in the process of erection, at Lind, was scattered in scores of pieces. In one instance, also, within the space of one mile, no less than in two buds of the old wood. In summer when 65 trees lay prostrate from the effects of the severe wind. Hail stones nearly as large as hen's eggs were seen to fall in some localities, destroying whole gardens. Window panes were also five. Let the lateral take their course. Found broken, and more or less damage done within a the fruit ripen best when the laterals are permitlarge radius of country .- [Ibid.

TERRIFIC HAIL STORM .- A hail storm in Livingston county, Ill, lately came with such force as to prostrate crops and shrubbery and even ing seven inches in diameter and sharp as cutice, such a vast amount of evil communications." Thousands of acres of corn were cut to the earth, fields of wheat and oats ruined. One man in Dwight township lost two hundred and forty acres of corn, and five hundred and filty acres of wheat and one hundred and ten acres of oats .--Scarcely a pane of glass is left in a window, and sashes and roofs were split, gashes were cut in the hides of cattle, and one man is laid up and severely injured by the hail .- [Ibid.

Recreation and Economy.

Lately we have seen good thoughts expressed in journals of education in reference to the training of children. We rejoice and are exceeding glad that thought is taking the right course in reference to education. The leaven is at work; patience and time only are required to leaven the whole.

The editor of the Michigan Journal of Education extracts from a "series of articles by a distinguished Detroit physician, published in the Detroit Tribune, excellent sentiments, though he can not endorse all the views presented." Slow and sure, neighbor; receive little by little, and it will do you more good; only, do not take it too often.

The writer quoted, says a reform in the physical and moral training of children is needed. This fact is sufficiently patent. The crowding of the brain is always injurious; in childhood, if continued, it is ruinous. He says young children can not with impunity be confined at diligent study more than two hours per day-one in the forenoon and one in the afternoon-and that, if the remainder of the school hours be devoted to moral and physiological training in the open air, the child will really learn more than he now does in the whole six. Very true. Can not the editor of the Michigan Journal indorse that?

In this case, the two hours would be pleasant; they would be used instead of being idled away, or passed in the merely brooding over books. He | 29-4

says: "If children could have all necessary exercise, recreation, and amusements at school, in the open air during daylight, and not be confined | liberally rewarded by leaving it with Judge E. Smith. in doors more than two or three hours during the day, they would need neither vacations nor Saturdays for recreation and contamination, and they would be, physically and mentally, satisfied to spend their evenings at home," etc. Very Children like to stay where they are happiest, among those who express love for them. If parents sympathize with their children, provide amusements for them at home, and associate with them in their amusements, they will find no difficulty in keeping their children there when they wish it. Make home the pleasantest place for the children, and never fear that either their affections or their steps will be turned away from it for enjoyment.

The writer says, that we build additional houses for the increasing number of children, which, when built, are but little better than racks and prisons; so that really tens of thousands of crooked in the joint. Whoever will bring him to me or dollars are spent which secure to the children deformity and disease, as the confinement, lack of due exercise, taxing of brains, etc., lead directly to these results. Now for the remedy-the economy of the subject. Instead of building more houses, buy, near the present ones, play-grounds, and provide suitable gymnastic apparatus in the air and sunshine for the pleasant weather, and under shelter for stormy days. This will be less expensive than such houses as are now being built. Then, as two hours per day-one in the forenoon and one in the afternoon-are as much as the younger can be accommodated on short notice and reasonable ones can profitably be kept in school after the book lessons in-doors are finished, let one of the teachers take them out on the play-ground and show them how to use their muscles so as to make them strong and firm; and train them in those exercises which develop their bodies to symmetry.

Thus, narrow chests, crooked spines, round shoulders, and small waists would become obsolete; while the children would enjoy the whole discipline, both mental and bodily.

During the two other thirds of school-timethe small ones being out at their bodily exercises -the older putils occupy the school-rooms, which, thus used, are ample for their accommodation. Not only will the houses afford room enough for the whole by such alternation of indoor and out-of-door exercises, but the teacher's mind, while attending to the older ones, is not distracted by the restlessness of the others, and his energies wasted in trying to "keep order." The older ones learn more, because confined a shorter time to books, and because their attention is not diverted from the lessons by the mischief and mirth of the more impulsive portion of the

- ~~~~~~~ GRAPES. - In regard to Grapes, Mr. Johnson, of Naples, N. Y., considered summer pruning important. Most of the grape-growers cut back the fruit branches to within two or three leaves of perty. the fruit. It is right to cut off the laterals, leaving only one leaf. After some experience in this way, allowed the fruit-bearing branches of uffew vines to take their course without cutting back, and then the fruit was bes!-much better than where they were cut back to two or three bads beyond the fruit.

Mr. Peck, of Naples, pruned in winter to within blossom, clipped off the ends of the bearing shoots. Did not cut within three or four leaves of the last bunch, and sometimes left four or ted to grow. The natural inclination of the vine is to bear heaviest at the top.
