He was going home, when his attention was attracted to some altercation between four men, and he stopped and asked what was the matter. At Hunterdon, N. J., 150 blacks, mostly from Virginia, and over 300 whites, were at work on a tunnel on the new railroad from Perth Amboy to the coal mines. NEW YORK, 25.—The London Times, of the 14th, copies the following from the Pall Mall Gazette, which professes to be able to guarantee the perfect authenticity of the announcement which it makes: which is that the government of Prussia has finally resolved upon the construction of a monster canal, to connect the Baltic with the North Sea coast. Doubtless, it says, the expense will be defrayed out of the French indemnity. The preliminary estimate and plans are already in existence, and in order to study the matter with sufficient minuteness before beginning operations, a committee of engineers and superior officers has been appointed to proceed to the spot, and they are expected in Kiel about the 20th inst. According to the Patrie, Russia regards the proposed canal with no very friendly or favorable eye, suspecting in it the means of substituting Prussian for Russian influence in the northern Europe. Certainly Prussia seems bent on developing its naval and other defensive resources to its northern coast. Kiel, the principal station of the German fleet, is to be strongly fortified by tower works. The German Gen. staff has declared that these works ought to be constructed at once, and whenever necessary they are to be at the disposal of the government.
