set off. For several hours Lucy stood by her mother, or chatted with her friends, apparently gaily enough. But her eyes continually roved in search of a handsome bronzed face, and her heart ached with fear lest she should not see it.

At last, in the afternoon, just before the market people were beginning to pack up, Wilhelm Van der Roost strolled through the place, his head down, his eyes fixed on the ground; he did not started; their eyes met. A deep flush stole over his face, and he stood trans- 13 Maiden Lane, fixed. Lucy cautiously glanced togave Wilhelm a meaning glance, took aim and threw an egg at him. The aim was good; it hit his nose. For a moment Wilhelm looked aghast. Could the simple, loving Lucy, who had clung to him bathed in tears when last he saw her, be turning against him now, and making him openly rediculous? He stroked his nose; it was diculous? He stroked his nose; it was the worse no daub of vallow.

He looked sgain at Lucy, her tearful, imploring look, and a finger pointing to the offending missile gradually revealed to him the possibility that the egg might be a means of communication. He picked small piece of paper inside, and that was uninjured. He red the paper slowly, once, twice; and then, after carefully watching Lucy, that he might catch her eye unseen, he gave three solemn, quiet node.

Mete catch her eye unseen, he gave three solemn, quiet nods. Lucy gave a hasty one in return, and smiled happily. They were only just in time, a second later, and the good old women's gossip ended.

Wilhelm went home with the precious little scrap of paper that had cost Lucy some time of careful thought and laborious writing-for in those days young girls were not the ready writers our farm-house lasses are now. and this note had to be both short and clear. It ran thus:-

"If you love me, come to-morrew night to our big barn dor at half-past eleven of the clock; wait till I come, and mind and bring your very bla with you. Do this as you love me; it is our last chance. Nod three times if you understand this aright."

The ruse had succeeded; the three nods were as good as an oath to Lucy that her lover would not fail. It was such a weight off her mind that all had gone well.

The birthday evening came, and Lucy was in a fever of expectation and delight, though her pleasure in her smart clothes, and in the various viands witherm would not be by to praise and admire. The tea was a great success; it was a north-country tea, such as we southerners never see. There were ples by the score, pork, pigeon and beef; there were fat geese and fowls, both hot and cold; there were whole loads of buns, cakes and plum-loaves.

When all this food was gradually consumed, the games and descripe here.

consumed, the games and dancing began in the big farm kitchen. Lucy's eye often wandered to the clock, and so did her mother's. The good lady had not forgotten her dream, and was firmly resolved that by eleven o'clock the guests must go, Lucy be up in her little white bed, far out of reach of that dreadful Dutchman, and the China set securely locked up to prevent its clattering down.

"L'homme propose, Dieu propose."
In the course of the evening a rumor arose that a poor crazy lad was locked up in the church. There had been ! funeral that afternoon, and one Billy Watkins, "a softee," was seen gaping and gazing about the church, and had not turned up since; as they were passing, some one had been terrified by a sound of crying coming from the empty building. Since then Billy had been missed, so this "some oune" put two and two together, and said he must be in the church.

Now Reuben the sexton was likewise Reuben the fiddler, and when the Reuben the fiddler, and when the young people came to the old man, and begged him to proceed at once to the church to let out the boy, he did not feel at all inclined to go. He was so cosily ensconced in Farmer Metcalf's chimney-corner and so happy fiddling and tippling warm ale, that he readily consented to let some one else go in his stead. Five or six big lads volunteered "for the fun of the thing." Lucy let them out under the pretence of seeing what sort of a night it was. It was a bitterly cold night, and a dense raw fog hung over the land. over the land.

"Mind yourselves, lads, she cried aloud, as the six youths, noisy with beer and dancing, set off.
"Never fear, Lucy," answered ene of them, "we'll have such a lark! We'll ring the bells in your honor."

"No, no, don't."

"Indeed we will; just you listen."

Lucy was in hopes it was only a joke; it would be so stupid if they did it, and every one would wonder what it meant. The bells never rang except on Sundays or for some great event, and the sound might puzzle Wilhelm. But true enough, some moments later, a first chime, then a second fell on the air, and presently a noisy merry peal made itself heard above the din of the party in the kitchen. Four of the lads were bell-ringers, so they knew what they were doing, and soon a regular swell of sweet church bells roused the quiet village and electrified the guests at Farmer Metcail's. Lucy repeated what the boys had said. People cried-"Ah, boys, will be boys," and went on with

THE SINCER

FAMILY MACHINE

Has been brought to perfection, regardless of time, labor or expense and is now incompar-ably the best Sewing Machine in existence. It is simple, compact, durable, beautiful, quiet, light-running, and capable of performing a range and variety of work never before attempted upon a single machine; using either sile, Twist, Linen or Cotton Thread, and sewing with equal facility the very finest and coarsest materials, or anything between the two extremes, in the most beautiful and substantial manner.

The New Improved Attachments for Hemming, (any width) Braiding, Embroidering Magic Ruffing, Gathering and sewing on (at the same time) Seif-Sewing, Cording, Tucking Quilting, Felling, Trimming, Binding, etc., are novel and practicable, and have been invented

Folding Tops and Cabinet Cases. New designs of the unique, useful and popular Folding Tops and Cabinet Cases, peculiar to the Singer Machine, are in every variety of Wood, such as black Walnut, Mahogany, Rosewood, Satinwood, and from the plainest to the most elaborate patiers and finish. The Machines themselves are plain or highly ornamented with pearl and gold to correspond with their tables or cabinets.

In the Singer the work is fed or passed through the Machine in the natural direction, namely, from the operator, permitting her to sit in a natural and healthy position. In many other Machines the work passes from right to left, or the reverse, compelling the operator to sit in a bent and unhealthy position, and thus causing usualmess of the back, etc.

The Singer uses a SHORT STRAIGHT Are what is required, we have only to state the stitch. Many other Machines use a long

On the Singer, the Tension on both the upper and lower threads is absolutely under the ready control of the operator, thus rendering the Machine always available for good sewing, which is not the case with any other. Many so-called cheap Machines are really worthless, and so are many of their new peculiarities and supposed advantages.

The SINGER is the Oldest Practical Sewing Machine.

Being about twenty years in the market. Having been constantly improved by the employment of the most skilled ingenuity of the age and unlimited capital, it is now diverted of all unnecessary parts and possesses All the Very Latest Inventions and Improvements, it is the only Machine sold on Honest Claims, as all its parts are Practical and will do all that is claimed for them. Some other Machines are Greatly Complicated, to de Useless and Silly things, and thus are rendered Liable to Constant Derangement. The Singer Seldom or Never gives trouble, but is readily and easily managed by those who utlerly fail on other Machines.
