ters school,

What was in every way the chief scelal event of the week was the big Lagoon dinner given on Thursday night by Senator and Mrs. Bamberger, A special train took the host and hostess and their guests to the pretty and picturesque resort at Farmington where the scene of the festive occasion was laid. The guests numbered about 50 persons who on arriving at the grounds were guided here and there, to this comfortable nook and that, until the dinner hour was announced. The tables were spread in the resort restaurant and formed a large "T" about which the guests sat. The decorations consisted largely of cut flowers and palms while many artistically twined festoons found their way from the celling to the tables below. At the plate of each lady was a spray of flowers and at the plate of each gentleman a boutonniere. The place cards were of the postal souvenir order and illumined with a striking picture of the Lagoon itself. The dinner comprised every delicacy of the season and the host and hostess confirmed their reputation anew as royal entertainers.
