

to the Philippines. The regiment is being polled to ascertain the exact feeling of its members.

Sheriff Blakely has offered a reward of $1,000 for the apprehension and conviction of the murderer of Miss May Wallace, the young woman who was shot Thursday night while standing in front of a window in her home at Pendleton, Ore. The affair appears to be still shrouded in mystery, although an officer here claims he will, within a few days, bring to light the murderer.

The Belgic brings to San Francisco the news of a murder which occurred in Corea just before she sailed from Yokohama. Geo. Lake, an American, was a storekeeper at Chemulpo. He was found dead with an ugly hole in his skull. A long blade with a heavy weight at the end of it was found by the side of the body. Deputy U. S. Consul J. C. Sands was investigating the murder when the Belgic sailed.

The thirty-first death in the Iowa regiment has occurred at the division hospital, San Francisco—that of Private Clifford Stillinger, company B, from typhoid fever. Earl McCamet, company M, of the same regiment, is near to death from typhoid. Recruits for the Eighteenth infantry, 24 in number, have arrived at San Francisco from Little Rock, Arkansas and Chicago, and are quartered at the Presidio.

A search of the effects of Capt. Granville R. Palmer of the Wyoming light battery has failed to reveal anything in writing that will explain his suicide. He left no last messages. The military board which examined into the circumstances of his self-inflicted death have a theory that his madness had reached a point where he imagined that he was to be arrested at any moment for the fancied shortage of an enormous sum of money.

The steamer Wolcott, from Copper River, Alaska, brings news of the drowning of a young woman named Grossop and a man named Tankerson, in Controller bay, October 5th. They were rowing from the mouth of the Chilkat river to Kayak Island and their boat capsized. The body of the woman was recovered. On it was found $1,000. She formerly lived in Minneapolis. With her sister she ran a dance hall on Controller bay.

Gus Enz, night clerk, and John Moore, waiter in the New York Kitchen, Wallace, Ida., were suffocated in a fire in the Idaho hotel Thursday night. They occupied rooms in the hotel. The hotel and livery stable adjoining, owned by Glen McDonald, and John Cameron's saloon and lodging house, Tom Reynolds' saloon and lodging house, all two story buildings, were entirely consumed by fire. The Fuller hotel, a three story brick adjoining, was saved.

The date of the trial of Mrs. Cordelia Botkin, accused of the murder of Mrs. John P. Dunning of Dover, Del., by means of a box of poisoned candy sent through the mails, has been set for December 5th. The indictment, charging her with the crime was read to her Saturday, and when asked to answer the charge, replied "Not guilty." Chief of Police Lees has prepared a strong case against the accused woman and confidently believes she will be convicted.

There has been another disaster at the coal mines. A report from Nainalmo, B. C., says there was a gas explosion in No. 1 shaft, New Vancouver Coal company's mines. Manager William McGregor, Donald Ferguson, Edmund Edmunds, James Price, George Lee, Peter Hugh and Fred Hurst were severely burned about the head, face and hands. George Lee had one of his legs broken. The mine was ordered to be closed a few hours by the coal mine inspector.

The torpedo boat destroyer Farragut has made what will probably be her final trial trip. She steamed at full speed for an hour without a single hitch, and accomplished the task laid out for her on the specifications to which she was built. She is a little faster than thirty knots, but just how much will not be known until the report of the trial board has been submitted to Washington. The members of the board have expressed themselves as well satisfied with her performance.

Fifteen sailors of the steam whaling bark Belvedere, filed a libel against the bark in the United States district court, San Francisco. They allege that they shipped for a twelve months whaling cruise and that they were frozen in all winter in the Arctic ocean, near Point Barrow, and that when the vessel got away and reached Port Clarence at the expiration of their term of service they asked to be discharged. They aver that the master, Captain Millard, not only refused to comply with their request, but kept them virtually prisoners on board the bark for eight months longer. Charges of cruelty are also made and damages are demanded.

Ray Hollenbeck, a young man about 18 years of age, was stabbed in the breast and killed shortly before midnight Saturday by Gus Beckford, a schoolmate. The stabbing occurred in a school house near Fairview, Ore., and was the result of a quarrel over the moving of the blackboard and some desks in the school house. Hollenbeck started toward Beckford, when the latter told him that if he came any closer he would stab him. Hollenbeck said if there was to be any stabbing he could stab, too. And as he reached for his pocketknife Beckford struck him a fatal blow over the heart. Hollenbeck cried out, "I am killed," and died almost instantly. Beckford made no attempt to escape.

On the yacht Chispa at Sausalito, Cal., Sunday night, Nick Berg was probably fatally wounded by Ike Elk. It appears that Berg's infatuation for Elk's wife was the cause of the shooting. Elk is in charge of the Chispa, and his wife was on board when Berg boarded the vessel and was shot down. It was on the Chispa and at Sausalito that Captain Brooks was murdered two months ago. The mystery of that crime has never been solved. After a diligent search the police practically abandoned the case. During the investigation Berg and Elk were listed among the suspects. Each succeeded in proving an alibi, however, and the case against them was dropped. The shooting of Berg may lead to an unraveling of the mystery of the Brooks murder.

A special to the Denver News from Nogales, Ariz., says: Much excitement exists here in consequence of an episode which threatens to result in international complications. On Sunday last James Temple, a conductor on the New Mexico and Arizona railway, was attacked by some Mexicans, and in defending himself, shot one of them, Juan Arvalla, fatally. This occurred about 2,000 feet north of the international boundary line. Later he returned to his hotel, which is south of the line, and was arrested by Mexican officers on a charge of murder, the law of the state of Sonora providing for the trial of any person charged with a crime against a Mexican citizen, though the crime may have been committed in a foreign country. Friends of Temple engaged an attorney, but the Mexican authorities refused to allow the prisoner to be seen. U. S. Consul John F. Darnell then appealed to the state department, and on Friday received the following telegram: Washington, Darnell, Consul, Nogales, Mex.—Have wired legation at Mexico City to demand immediate release of Temple. (Signed) Hay, secretary of State. As yet no word has been received from the City of Mexico. Temple is in the prison at Magdalena.

Although complete returns have not yet been received from all the counties of California, the indications are that the majority of Henry T. Gage (Republican) for governor will be nearly 30,000. His associates on the state ticket are all elected, with the possible exception of Curry for secretary of state, who ran far behind and may have been beaten by Thompson, Democratic candidate. For justices of the supreme court McFarland (Republican) and Vandyke (Democrat) are in the lead and will probably win as the precincts to be heard from are not expected to change the relative position of the opposing candidates. Mayor Phelan is re-elected in San Francisco by about 3,000 majority, but with the exception of the assessor and three superior judges and two supervisors, the other municipal officers will be Republicans. The next state legislature will have a large Republican majority in joint ballot, insuring the election of a Republican United States senator.

Shortly before 5 o'clock Wednesday morning while two judges were counting the votes in the Dublin Gulch precinct of Butte, two men with handkerchiefs over their faces appeared at the door of the polling place. They had revolvers in their hands. The order to throw up hands was given. There were five judges, two clerks, two checkers, a deputy sheriff and several spectators present. Several threw up their hands, Dennis O'Leary, the deputy sheriff, jumped at one of the men. Both began firing. John Daly, one of the checkers, was shot in the stomach and O'Leary's shoulder was shattered. The masked men escaped at once, and all efforts to trace them have been unavailing. Both wounded men were taken to the hospital. Daly died on the way there. The precinct where the shooting occurred is a strong Democratic precinct, and some think it was an attempt to steal the ballot box. The general opinion, however, is that it was an attempt at robbery, as some of the men in the place were known to have considerable money.
