

REFRACTORY WHEAT.

But Flax Seed Thought Nineteen Kernels from a Girl's Eye.

WILLIAM, Utah, June 27.—Although the fact that it has been in print, I believe that it is somewhat unusual and hard to believe, notwithstanding there is evidence enough to convince the most skeptical, I take the liberty to give it.

A crowd of people had assembled to enjoy themselves in a stinging practice, when a rather mischievous boy began handing wheat around. In performing this pleasant task he threw a handful in the face of a young boy, who threw up his hand and rubbed his eyes. Both boys were thought of it until several hours later, when three kernels of wheat were taken from her eye. From this time for a month she was confined to a room, and was in three weeks was cured, and was the only one causing pain. The last two kernels, taken out July thirty days after they were taken, were perfectly good. Not such pain was experienced, the girl having to remain from school only one week. Flaxseed was the only remedy used. One night seven of them were put into the eye, and during the night they seemed to have formed an abscess, for the next morning four of them appeared, being the culprit for which they were sent. In seeing out the course of the wheat was from the inner corner, around under the upper lid to the outer corner, thence under the lower lid to the inner corner. O. J. CALL.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

WASHINGTON, June 29, 1893.—Coele has been having a war with a local combine, which though comparatively small is worked upon the same principles that govern the big trusts throughout the country, and the result may be interesting to the entire country. The government departments use four or five million pounds of ice every season, and the furnishing of it is given out by contract to the lowest bidder. This year the five or six local ice companies formed a combine and raised the price of ice to forty cents a ton, and when the bids for furnishing the government were opened it was discovered that they proposed making Uncle Sam pay about double last year's price for his ice. The bids were all thrown out and a new advertisement for bids published. A Philadelphia company made a bid at a reasonable figure, but before it was accepted withdrew it, because it had been notified that the local combine had taken steps which would prevent the being able to get a vessel loaded with ice to get to the Potomac river to Washington. So the matter now stands. The present contract expires the first of July. It has been suggested that the government use one of its own wharves to tow vessels loaded with ice for the departments at Washington, but nothing has yet been determined upon. The local combine is confident that the government will have to get the ice from them and to pay their price. It is the outcome of it will demonstrate the weakness of the government in dealing with a combine in a manner that will not be lost upon other combines.

No verdict was given by a Washington coroner's jury gave more general satisfaction than that which found Colonel Fred C. Ainsworth, U. S. A., Contractor, Dant, Capt. Cowen and Engineer Glean guilty of criminal neglect and consequently of manslaughter in causing the death of twenty-three men in Ford's old Theater. The accused have given bail—$10,000 each, and their case has gone to the grand jury, which is now in session. If true bills are found against them they cannot be tried until the fall term of the criminal court. The army court of inquiry appointed by Secretary Lamont will not begin its work until the grand jury shall have disposed of Colonel Ainsworth's case. Whatever may be the result of the action of the grand jury Colonel Ainsworth will retain his rank in the army and continue to draw his salary until tried by a court-martial and dropped from the army. The President can suspend him from his position as chief of the records and pension division, and will probably do so if the grand jury brings in a true bill of manslaughter—many think that he should have done so as soon as the verdict of the coroner's jury was rendered—but he cannot deprive him of his rank in the army; only a court-martial can do that.

The death of Senator Stanford was a great shock to his warm personal friends in Washington, although they knew that his health was bad. Mr. Stanford was healthy a day or two before he was something over and better—a rich man whose heart and pocketbook were always open to his fellow man who had been his intimate friend. The presence of a degeneration of Louisiana sugar planters, headed by two democratic Congressmen, in Washington and the object of their visit is a famous saying of the late General Hancock—"The tariff is largely a local question." The gentlemen are here to discuss that sugar shall be put into the new tariff bill to the extent of one and one-half of two cents a pound, if the tariff is reduced, it will be that one of the heaviest duties that will occur over the new tariff bill will be that on the sugar clause. That a tariff on sugar is so popular with the masses is apparent in every close observer, but money has got to be raised somehow and it may be that the $4,000,000 or $5,000,000 which a tariff on sugar would put in the treasury each year may outweigh the opposition of the masses with a majority of Congress. On the other hand it should not be forgotten that the votes of the individuals of the several states make and unmake Congress, and this fact is not often duly considered, although it is often secretly and cunningly turned down by those who believe the "masses" to be a solid block. It is a fact that a strong lobby backed by wealthy men who are opposed to an income tax is to be here when Congress meets for the purpose of opposing the proposed tariff on sugar against the interests of the people.

Politicians say that Secretary Lamont is the administration candidate for governor of New York. Previous administration candidates for governor of that state have not been successful. Folger and Fassett were known as administration candidates.

Inventory Resolution. Under this head James W. Donahue contributes a suggestive paper to the issue. He says that a person who will examine somewhat into his own mental processes will find much to interest and confound him. He mentions that experience which has occurred to everybody—how, in the midst of intense mental preoccupation with any subject, one finds himself suddenly handling some old time that he had in his childhood, often infusing a frightful discordant jangle that he has tried time and again to forget. The truth is that you can really forget nothing, except perhaps what you most want to remember.

Another common experience is that in a moment, without warning, there often flashes across the mind scenes, words and events that have no connection in the remotest manner with anything the individual has in hand at the time. He may be thinking how to increase his bank account when all at once it will come back to him how he fell into the water when he was a boy. On the whole it is the recollections of one's earlier years that foremost come back unbidden. Perhaps events are pictured in the thought ether and hang about our atmosphere forever, ready to pop before the child's eye as any unguarded moment.

Did it is the unhappy recollections, the miserable scenes, that one would blot out forever which haunt us most persistently, the guilty abolition at the front. If getting people know how often guilty skeletons lurked on the mind in later years, they certainly would be more chary of doing things that are not creditable to remember. Mr. Donahue says: It has been suggested that some temporary statute give of a claimant to some such remedy as that which we have here proposed. It is not necessary that we say "back from memory a faded scene" and "out of the work of the brain" and "write them all in the 'memory' book" will tell you. However, I have not space to say more than that if there be any of those who are not satisfied with the present state of affairs, they should take steps to have the proposed law passed. It is the object of this article to have the proposed law passed with the least delay possible. There will return again and again to the mind, and it may be that some day you will be the author of a scene of horror and pity the ghost of an unrequited passion or the face of an enemy in one's face and again and again will appear to reduce and lead to sad and dangerous consequences.

DR. SCHENCK'S MANDRAKE PILLS. Mandrake Pills have a value as a household remedy far beyond the power of language to describe. The remedy is hardly to be found that does not keep them on hand for use in emergencies.

MANDRAKE PILLS. It is the only vegetable substitute for that dangerous stimulant, Morphine, and while its action as a curative is fully equal, it possesses none of its poisonous effects. In Constipation, Mandrake sets upon the bowels without depressing them in subsequent continuance. No remedy acts so directly on the liver, making an opening more quick than any other. Mandrake, and Senna and Nuxvomica are these.

PILLS. The pills are all made by hand. Price 10c per box. Sold by all druggists. Prepared by C. A. SNOW & CO., SALT LAKE CITY.
