Book-keepers out of employment should take steps to acquire a know-ledge of Telegraphy, which would often emble them to obtain employ-ment. There is quite an increasing demand for telegraphers, and it is from a knowledge of this fact that I am induced to offer increased facili-ties for those wishing to learn. It is also an accomplishment that is de-simble to understand and being easy to learn-much easier than many suppose—it would be well for those having an hour to spare three days in the week, to take hold at once, while a new class or two is being or. while a new class or two is being or. while a new class or two is being or. ganized. It might be some improve-ment to adopt a few telegraphic sig-nals in sounding fire alarms for the information of the public as to loca tion of fire, which would be soon understood by the public, especially those who took an interest in the information. Telegraphy in classes can be taught for ten cents per lesson. Give the boys and girls a chance. It is easily acquired and useful to all. Respectfully, H. J. HILL. Deseret Telegraph Office, P. O.
