Complainant. The story of the transaction is, in brief, that Mr. Salomon sent his son south from this city to invest the money in sheep. The young man went and ostensibly performed his duty. Developments a few days ago revealed the fact that he had never purchased any sheep, but that he had made away with the cash, and his father deemed it his duty to prosecute him for the offense. offense

FOUR FINE PICTURES.

Paintings of the Great Salt Lake, Utah, by Alfred Lambourne.

Utah, by Alfred Lambourne. Four pictures now on exhibition at the Denver & Rio Grande office, Seventeenth and Larimer streets, rep-resent the remarkable scenery found on the shores of the Great Salt Lake of Utah. This body of water, now well known as the Dead Sea of America, is one of the strangest in the world, not only because of its waters, but on account of the wonderful ef-fects of color to be seen over its sur-face. The water itself is of a pale torquois green, but respondent to every mood of the sky. At times it is of the most beautiful green, at other times it burns with the flery tints re-flected from the brilliant sunsets for which Utah is famous. In the four pictures referred to, the artist, Alfred Lambourne, has attempted to portray something of the rich coloring as well as the characteristic features of the mountain shores. "Morning at the Sand Dunes,""Cliffs of Promontory," "Afterglow on the Wasstch" and "Sunset Across the Davis Strait," are the tuties by which the four pictures are known. They show the south, north, east and west sides in the order named. The one representing the southern shore is a very effective piece of work, the noose placed around his neck and fitted snugly under his chin. Not a tremble or quiver could be noticed in him as the rope touched his flesh. He was told that his time had now come and that if he had a last word to say he must say it quickly; his silence was an answer, and he was swiftly run up into the air and the rope securely fastened to a post of the corral. Next morning the body was found as left the night before; with a large card suspended from its neck, bearing this inscription: "We protect our ladies —let this be a warning to others." Pocatello.

lively Idaho town, on the 25th ult., says: Pocatello is full of business, as it is now the end of division of the O. S. L. and U. & N. railways, and the machine shops that were formerly at Eagle Rock and Shoshone are new all here. The evening of the 24th was the oc-casion of a grand ball in the Keeney House which was greatly crowded. Parties were here from north, south, east and west. The first snow of the season fell last night, and the hills and valleys are mantled in white. W. F. Fisher, of Oxford, is putting up a new store here. Mr. Newbury, the restaurant man, is located here. He was formerly in Salt Lake.
