EMPIRES UNDER FEMALE CONTROL.
—Those who believe in the necessary and heaven-ordained dominance of man in this sublunary sphere must be somewhat puzzled to reconcile with their theory the fact that for the last quarter of a century the two greatest empires in the world have been under female control. Never, save in the days of ancient Assyria, has there been the British Empire flourished, so marvelously as in the reign of Queen Victoria, and only possibly because of large enough to be comparable to the expansion of England—the revival of China—accomplished by the woman of the East. The Empress Dowager of China, who for more than twenty years has ruled the vast empire, has position in the most populous empires, has, however, decided upon resigning the regency next February, when the young emperor, now 10 years old, will

EVENING NEWS.

Saturday Oct. 9, 1904

VERNONA JARBEAU.

HER CONVERSATION WITH A SAN FRANCISCO NEWS-GATHERER.

The trim little figure of the "Yum Yum" in "The Mikado" performance of the Duff Opera Company the past week, has captured a large number of San Franciscans by its grace, as well as by the sweet soprano voice which it has lent to the attraction for its owner, but only a few have been introduced to the meeting Miss Jarbeau in private life. One of the fortunate is the writer, who owes his success to the courtesy of Mr. J. C. Duff, the gentleman who shapes the destinies of the Opera Company, and the meeting took place recently.

"Now I just feel confident you are going to be a person of influence," said the writer, "the three little maids," which the writer introduced to him in her parlor on the second floor of the Baldwin Hotel. Her auditor will fulfill the little lady's prediction by saying that Miss Jarbeau is a delightful brunette, with a profusion of hair almost as dark as the eyes, and a smile quite. She is quick and witty in conversation, and said—Well, if you do not intend to begin the conversation that way, but will tell you the story of the "Yum Yum" in the company—Miss Jarbeau, Miss Lillian Russell and myself, we are indeed a happy family. We took a trip through China, to-day, "gaily continued the conversation, and I enjoyed immensely. You know, I never saw anything of China, notwithstanding my familiarity with Japan; therefore to me it so really interesting here was quite a treat. Why, one would imagine they were out of the United States completely, passing through the desert, and seeing their gaily decorated restaurant, and crowded shops. Oh, I bought such a load of bric-a-brac that I'm afraid almost of bankruptcy. I liked every thing I saw, and the cunning little pig-tailed babies included. I heard a Chinese band, too, and it was very nice. The visitor acknowledged it was, and suggested the idea of having such an accompaniment for singing oriental music, whereupon "Yum Yum" said she thought it would be a novelty, but it would not do for "The Mikado."

This is your first visit to San Francisco, Miss Jarbeau said.

"Yes, I have never been to San Francisco, although I have been upon the stage seven years."

Later on Miss Jarbeau said: "I have seen the city, and I have seen the footlights I shake just like that," and two tiny hands fluttered before the reporter's eyes with other accompaniments of nervousness.

Critically considered, Miss Jarbeau is a surprise to most of us, though her fame had to a certain extent preceded her appearance. She is a young girl, prepared for the charming actions and brilliant vocalists that Miss Jarbeau has proven herself to be. It is remarkable that one who has been singing with a part like that of "Yum Yum" for nearly a year and a half, should be herself to the conditions required by the sublimity and suffering "Joan the Maid" and have every trace of the staid and gushing Japanese school girl. Her "Yum Yum" is an ever-changing character, and she is a perfect artist.

"Joan the Maid" is a perfect artist, and she is a perfect artist. A faithful and dramatic portrayal of a patient suffering, she is a perfect artist. A faithful and dramatic portrayal of a patient suffering, she is a perfect artist. A faithful and dramatic portrayal of a patient suffering, she is a perfect artist.

Capacity of a Miner's Boot.

A few days ago a man went into a store in Gold Hill to buy a pair of shoes. "What'll you take to fill 'em with whisky?" he asked. The storekeeper had never made such a trade before, and the novelty of the thing struck him at once. Making a lightning calculation as to how much whisky the boots would hold, he replied, "Two dollars." "I'll buy 'em," said the customer, as he threw the money upon the counter. The storekeeper, with a grin, proceeded to fill the boots, but as he proceeded his face in blank astonishment when he found the capacity of the boots to be something over three gallons. The purchaser departed in a tickled manner with his boots, and a load of whisky on a pole between himself and another fellow, who evidently "in" on the proposition. It will be a waste of time for anyone to attempt to take up the same joke upon the merchant.

AFRICA'S RICHEST MAN.

THE WORLD'S GREATEST SLAVE AND IVORY TRADER ON HIS WAY TO ZANZIBAR.

The wealthiest man in Central Africa is now on his way to the Indian ocean, in response to a letter from the Sultan of Zanzibar, requesting a visit from him. His name is Tippu Tib, and he lives not far from Nyangwe, the great trading point of many black tribes on the Upper Congo. Readers of African books of travel have heard a great deal of Tippu Tib, and as recent years have greatly increased his power and wealth we are likely to hear much of him in the future.

Tippu Tib is only forty-five years old, as black as coal, and of negro blood, which means that he comes of an admixture of the coast tribes of east Africa, and has also a very little Arab blood in his veins. He has been in Central Africa for twenty-five years, and is to-day the greatest slave and ivory trader in the world. He has outstripped all his competitors through his force of intellect and strength of character. As long ago as the time when Cameron introduced him to our notice, he visited Nyangwe and sold the bullying Arab traders there to our notice, he did not leave certain native allies of his alone it would be the worse for them. They lost no time in pledging eternal peace with Tippu Tib and all his friends.

Cameron says Tippu Tib was the greatest slave trader in the world, and a trader of negro blood, he was a thorough and cunning trader. He was a white visitor speak of the elegance of his Arab attire and his courtly and affable manner. He was a white visitor speak of the elegance of his Arab attire and his courtly and affable manner. imposed on them by the laws in force. A release of real estate to foreigners for a term of more than ten years shall be considered as a transfer. The federal law may restrict the civil rights of foreigners to the extent of subjects to the same liabilities which the laws of their own countries impose on Mexicans. Foreigners shall contribute to the public expenses in the same manner provided for by the laws. They shall submit to the decisions and sentences of tribunals without applying to different resources than those by law provided for. They shall apply for diplomatic intervention only in cases of denial of justice of voluntary delay in the administration of justice, and that after having tried in vain all different means afforded them by the laws of the Republic and in the manner determined by international laws. The compulsory matriculation of foreigners is repealed. The law does not repeal the twenty league limit. Consequently to purchase real estate which is within 20 leagues from the frontier, the permission of the President is still necessary. To purchase land proper to within five leagues of the coast, permission must be obtained by special act of Congress.

Four Pounds of Lead on his Foot.

A surgeon of this city, who makes a business of strapping crooked spines and bandy legs, and filling rusty joints in the old and young, received the other day a patient from the country. They were father and son. The boy, some 14 years old, limped painfully, dragging his right leg like a stick across the room, and when he sat down arranging it like a prop in front of him.

"White awelling?" queried the surgeon.

"Yess," said the father. "Dick was thrown down stairs by his nurse when he was a baby, and he hasn't got over it yet. Seems to be getting worse every day. What can you do for him, doctor?"

The surgeon picked up the boy's useless foot, and let it drop with an exclamation of surprise.

"What makes it so heavy?"

"Heavy?" echoed the father. "Why that ain't heavy. Only four pounds of lead."

"Four pounds of lead!" An expression of pain and pity settled on the surgeon's face as he looked from father to son and back again to the father. The latter hastened to explain.

"Why, doctor," he began, "the boy's been wearing that on his foot ever since he was a baby, and it hasn't done him a bit of good. That leg ain't a quarter of an inch longer than it was a year or two ago, and Dick's getting weaker all the time, and—"

"I should say so—wheeler—yes. Wonder he isn't dead. What put that into your head?"

"Yess, the lead."

"Why, don't they all wear it?"

"They? No, what do you mean?"

"The cripples—people with white swelling—don't they carry lead weights in their thickened shoes to stretch the leg back to its right length?"

The surgeon was too angry to make reply. He turned his attention to the boy, examined his deformity, cut the lead from the shriveled foot, and sending for a shoemaker, ordered him to make a shoe for the boy, and then hobbled out with a light heart and a lighter foot.

"That man ought to be made to carry a mill-stone for ten years," muttered the surgeon, as he turned to his next patient. New York Tribune.

How to Write a Popular Poem.

A bard who knows his business can bring on the Delphic dizziness, stand upon the quaking tripod of the trembling, wide-eyed Muses, hitch the piston-rod of frenzy to his rhythmic apparatus, and steam up his poetry motor with the real divine madness, just whenever and wherever and whichever way he chooses.

Need not wait the Muse's benison, like old-fashioned bards in Tennyson, wait the still small voice of silence and the touch of inspiration; let him take his cyclopædia and his Webster's dictionary, pick out strange words, and make a list of them, and then hobbled out with a light heart and a lighter foot.

"That man ought to be made to carry a mill-stone for ten years," muttered the surgeon, as he turned to his next patient. New York Tribune.

DEATH TO COYOTES.—The Red Bluff Sentinel says that B. A. Bell, Superintendent of the Gallatin ranch, has discovered an excellent plan to get rid of coyotes. He first had five from pick-up made. He got an old ewe of little value and took her to the takes where a band of mountain sheep were herded. He then tied a rope about six feet long to her neck and the other end of the rope to a picket pin, which he drove into the ground. He then placed four steel traps at equal distances from each other in a circle, a short distance outside the circle, that would be made by the sheep circle. Over the ground and traps hay was spread so that the coyotes could not see them. The trick worked like a charm, and for three mornings in succession Mr. Bell had the satisfaction of finding a live coyote in one of the traps. He changed the location of the old ewe and caught two more coyotes. Since that time he has not been troubled with coyotes killing his sheep.
