Why this covert allusion to his father's supposed depreciation and heresy, if the subject of polygamy, as stated, was not even a public speaker-let alone his claim of inspiration—it seems to me he should at least not deny the fact that polygamy was a tenet of his father's faith, and then admit it in the same public it by his martyred parent. thusiasm" for a cause, the originator of which he seems to believe has disgraced its present advocate? Which promulgation of its principles—the hand established and organized the Church, or the man who sixteen years after the death of that Prophet, comes upon the scene and denounces him as a truant from God, and proclaims his doctrines as false and fatal to society? In one portion of the speaker's addresses he declares that he always adhered strictly to the Book of Mormon, and in another place denies a doctrine therein contained. In a certain passage of that Book beloved by the Saints, there is a statement of the Almighty that if He shall design to raise up a people by the practice of polygamy He will so command them. If the practice of polygamy as Mr. Smith believes, be a crime in the eyes of God, how could the Creator predict or presuppose such a command to emanate from Him? And judging from this promise that the Lord would at some subsequent period require His people to practice polygamy, how can Mr. Smith claim to adhere to the teachings of the Book, and yet denounce polygamy, and condemn his father, the great Prophet of the last days, because he declared the time had now come which was foreshadowed in the Book of Mormon, for plural marriage to be reintroduced, and that God had com-
