Salary and commission paid to right party, with opportunity of advance-ment. Call 8 to 9 Monday morning, 222 S. now playing at the Curtis theater, says the Denver Post.

Miss Mathis is only 16 years old and this is her first season on the road, but she has mapped out her future already. The fact that even with her brief career she has made a hit in a breezy farce-comedy part does not appeal to her. While her manager thinks comedy her forte, Miss Mathis says she will never be satisfied until she reaches the top notch as an emotional actress June Mathis was born at Leadville where her father conducted a drug store. When she was a little baby the family moved to Denver and Mr. Mathis contemplated going into business. But receiving an excellent offer to go to Salt Lake City he accepted, and now owns one of the largest pharmacles in the city of the Saints. It was at Salt Lake that June Mathis ecame possessed of the idea to go on the stage. As a baby she displayed remarkable talent as an elocutionist, and at the age of 9 made her first public appearance. She was cast in a little comedy with several other children, and when the day to appear came most of Miss Mathis' stage companions were sick with the mumps. She was equal to the occasion, however, and played five roles, carrying out the entertainment successfully.

Being unable to stand the Salt Lake altitude Miss Mathis, accompanied by her mother, went to San Francisco. There she appeared in vaudeville as the "child wonder," and last April she joined the "Whose Baby are You?" company, appearing in her part after only two days' study of the lines and with no rehearsal.

Mrs. D. W. Mathis, mother of Miss

June, always travels with the young lady. They have not seen Mr. Mathis for 15 months, but he will arrive in Denver today and spend Christmas with them. He will also accompany them from here to Salt Lake City, the company playing a week of one-night
