THE EVENING NEWS.

Friday, June 19, 1874.

SPEECH OF MR. CROUNSE

On the Poland Utah Bill, in the U. S. House of Representatives, June 2nd, 1874.

(CONCLUDED.)

Now, in order to make this bill palatable to the House, if I may use the term, it must be prefaced with some imaginary grievances, or the statement of a condition of affairs which really does not exist. It becomes necessary to refer away back to the early history of this people when they were isolated, away off, and when they had imposed and inflicted upon them United States officials who by their arrogance became intolerable. At such a time they may have rebelled, and such circumstance must be made a pretext for calling forth action on the part of Congress to-day. But I say, look over the Territory of Utah to-day and see where is the rebellion which is talked of here, where is the defiance of law? Canvass and scan the organic act organizing the Territory, and by which the people are allowed to make laws for themselves. Look over those laws and compare them with the laws of any other Territory of the United States, and then see where they fall short. Not one word is brought forward here, beyond general assertion that things are all wrong there, for the foundation of this action on the part of Congress.

The gentleman says that while the United States appoints its marshals, the Territory, in defiance of law, appoints its marshals. Why is this? The office of United States marshal is as distinct from the office of territorial marshal as is day from night. Their offices run in different directions. One is charged with the execution of the writs, processes, etc., emanating from the United States courts and in United States cases. I have the record of a case here where the judges who were sent out to Utah attempted to set aside the territorial marshal. That Territory saw fit under its laws to appoint a marshal; for what? For the disposition of matters arising under their laws and in no way in conflict with the laws of the United States.

Now, that they have a right to do. If that is denied them, then one of the first principles of a republican system of government is gone and wiped out. When a people in a Territory cannot be accorded the right to enact their own laws, those that relate to themselves, as long as they do not conflict with the Constitution of the United States, and if they cannot select their own officers to execute those laws, then I say you are striking down the very first principles of American liberty. You are taxing men without representation, you are demanding obedience to laws which they have no voice in making, and you foist upon them officers to execute the laws under no responsibility to the people governed. It is a proposition unheard of in the history of American law making or jurisprudence.

I say then that the charge brought here was that they elected a territorial marshal in defiance of the laws of the United States, which provided a United States marshal. Judge McKean of the supreme court of that Territory, took that position; a position never taken before in any other Territory of the United States. That case was brought to the Supreme Court of the United States and how was it terminated there? I have the record before me, but cannot take time to read it. Here is the information filed by the United States officer and the answer of the territorial marshal, where he distinctly says that he disclaims any right to interfere in the control of United States affairs; that he is elected under the organic act relating to the affairs of Utah, is elected by the Legislature of Utah, and in pursuance of that election he acted in the discharge of his duties as such in serving writs and processes which emanated from the court as far as they related to territorial matters; for instance, the crime of larceny, murder, or any offense which is made such by the laws of the Territory of Utah. In those cases, where the processes went forth through the territorial marshal, he executed the writs and processes, as he had a right to do, and as he should do, they involving no infraction of any law of the United States. But that, I say, is made an offense. When I asked from the gentleman from Vermont [Mr. Poland] the privilege of interrupting him that I might inquire whether or not the United States had not sustained that position, I was denied that courtesy. This bill must be pushed down our throats, as though this House were a lot of willing subjects only too ready and anxious to go to any length that gentlemen may dictate. This measure is to be put through under the whip and spur of the previous question. But an hour—one poor hour—is given to the discussion of matters involving the rights of one hundred and thirty-five thousand people, whose only fault is that they entertain religious convictions differing from those entertained by gentlemen here. I tell you, sir, it will not do for this Congress to assume a mock regard for particular laws while unmindful of others. Let every man turn his sight inward; let him stand before the forum of his own conscience; let him ask himself whether he has any religious convictions at all. Men who have none at all are perhaps too apt to be intolerant toward those who have. I say that while I deplore the system prevailing in Utah, while I am not in sympathy with that form of religion, while I desire and hope that in the progress of civilization it will be wiped out, I hope the American Congress will not act hastily in this regard.

As I wish to be sparing of the time of the gentleman from Utah, [Mr. Cannon,] I can only say that I did hope to assail this bill in its details. There are several views I would like to submit in which I am satisfied this House would concur with me. I am satisfied that this House would not upon deliberation enact the seeming anomaly of having one set of people make laws while officers appointed by another and distinct authority, are to execute those laws. Why, sir, by this mode of proceeding you strike down the very law-making power itself. If those people cannot have their own marshals and their own prosecuting attorneys to proceed against offenses arising under their own laws they will make no laws. They will wipe out their laws entirely if they cannot have a voice in executing them. Examine all the laws that have been passed since the organization of this government, and where will you find that any like this has been enacted?

Mr. ELDREDGE. The gentleman will allow me to suggest to him that the marshals selected by the local authorities of Utah sustain precisely the same relation to that Territory that our Sheriffs bear to the respective States. There is no difference or distinction in that regard.

Mr. CROUNSE. Precisely. That is what I wish to have understood by the House; that we are asked to enact a law which is in defiance of all precedents in our legislation, and for no sufficient reason; because the system of polygamy, if it is to be assailed at all, is to be assailed under the laws of the United States. Congress should not, and I say cannot in consistency with the principles underlying our institutions, enact laws that will thrust upon that people a set of government officials responsible to no one except the government here at Washington.

I say that this people does not deserve such treatment. Aside from the question of their religion they are entitled to the same rights, immunities and privileges which would be claimed in behalf of any other people. They have shown themselves law-abiding and industrious. You may look over all the States and Territories of this Union and nowhere will you find the rate of taxation lighter than in that Territory. In this respect the people of that Territory have made a record which ought to be the envy of the general government and of every State government. I say that people who have behaved in this manner should not bring down upon their heads the enactment of laws which must simply operate to enrich United States officials and turn the people over bound hand and foot to the tender mercies of officers whom they have no voice in choosing.

While I would not antagonize the bill in gross, I hope that as presented here and sought to be forced through it will be voted down, and that the opportunity may be given to correct and modify it in those essential particulars which I know this House, upon calm consideration, would not approve. As a Congress we cannot afford to act upon the principle which I intimated at the outset appeared to be influencing many members here. I fear that principle operates too largely. I have never known a case in which the law for the government of a great people who are asking to become a State of this Union has been passed in such haste, and with so little apparent necessity.—Congressional Record.

IMMENSE BARGAINS!!

Reliable Testimony!

CARL C. ASMUSSEN,

BEING very desirous to dispose of all his fine Jewelry, Watches, Clocks, Field and Opera Glasses, Spectacles, etc., etc., offers a rare chance to the public for investment.

The JEWELRY is selected with the utmost care, both for beauty and excellence. The WATCHES are unsurpassable both for strength and good going.

☞ All goods are warranted.

Appended are testimonials from most reliable gentlemen well known in the Territory:

"The Watch I bought of you in 1872 goes most excellently, never varies a minute; has never had any repairs to it since I got it, although it has been exposed to very hard usage.

A. C. BROWN,
Brakeman U. S. R. R."

"The Watch I bought of you last year has proved to be the best article I ever had, having lost it twice in the water, once at the depth of six feet, besides a great many other hardships, and stands all with perfect ease, being always right to time.

JOHN SANDS, Camp Douglas."

"The Watch I bought from you is all that can be desired. As a timekeeper it beats anything I ever had, and stands the jilting and rough usage without the least variation.

DANIEL G. BRIAN,
Paper Mill, Salt Lake Co."

And the like high recommends from Messrs. H. E. W. Cheales, Salt Lake City; C. J. Lambert, Paper Mill, Salt Lake Co.; G. O. Lambert, Juvenile Instructor Office; T. O. Angel, Church Architect, Salt Lake City; Cyrus Bates, Tooele City; Bishop R. F. Sheets, City; Bishop S. A. Woolley, City, Archibald Gardner, West Jordan; I. M.
