THE LATE "LIZZIE" WINDER—AS A GIRL.

This picture shows Mrs. Lizzie Winder Eldredge as she looked when she used to be the life of her circle from 1870 to 1875. An Lizzie Winder she was one of the most popular girls in the city. She married Mr. Joshua Eldredge and moved to Bear Lake where she died some years ago. She was the daughter of President John R. Winder and Mrs. Ellen Winder.

WHERE THE PROFIT IS IN SUGAR BEETS.

Writing on the above topic in Orange Judd Farmer, C. H. Heller of Ontario, says that he considers the most important factors which influence the profits made in raising sugar beets are: The adaptation of the soil to the crop, the amount of bird and insect damage to grow them, and the distance to the refinery. We consider the character of the soil most important, but careful and thorough preparation is a close second.

Last year our crop was grown on a somewhat gravelly soil prepared in the ordinary way, with a liberal application of manure. It averaged $37 a acre. This year it averaged $49 an acre. The difference in the two crops was due to improvement in our methods. In preparing the land for this year we started after harvest last autumn. Fall wheat had been on the land during the two previous seasons, the field having been manured at the rate of eight tons to the acre each time. The stubble was turned under by shallow plowing, followed by surface cultivation, and weeds encouraged to germinate as soon as possible. Then the field was plowed a second time seven inches deep. Late in the fall one-half was plowed a third time, the remainder being plowed early in spring. This late fall plowing was a mistake, as the weeds were more numerous on this part of the field than on the spring plowed part. No manure was applied, and only surface cultivation given. The soil was well pulverized, soft and mellow. After rolling the land and the beets were sown on the flat at the rate of 18 pounds to the acre in drills 21 inches apart.

We started the cultivators as soon as we could see the rows. The first cultivation was intended only to break the crust. In the second, and each succeeding cultivation we usually go a little deeper than the previous time. We always cultivate as often and continue as long as we can without breaking off too many leaves. Our idea was to have the soil loose and mellow between the rows to a depth of five inches, since deep cultivation increases both the yield and the percentage of sugar in the beets.

When the second leaves appeared bushing and thinning were commenced. This must be done at the proper time; a little too early is better than a trifle late. On this size of the crop largely depends. At this operation the beets were left standing 10 inches apart. If properly done, cleaning them twice is all that is necessary. There must be no half-way methods with this crop, as everything must be done thoroughly if a profit is to be obtained. In harvesting much labor can be saved by a good beet lifter, which is a labor-saver in itself and should be used by every grower.

The total cost of this season's crop, including rent of land, all labor and teaming beets a distance of eight miles to refinery, was $40 an acre, leaving us a net profit of $9 an acre. This refinery pays $4 a ton for beets testing 12 per cent and 23 1-2 cents a ton addition for each 1 per cent sugar.

ALFRED NOBEL.

FOUNDER OF PEACE PRIZE ROOSEVELT MAY RECEIVE.

Alfred Nobel left by will a fund producing an income of about $200,000 a year to provide five equal prizes to be awarded to those who, during the year preceding "have rendered the most eminent services to humanity" in several specified lines.

Mr. Nobel's name will be recorded by future historians in connection with two seemingly incongruous deeds: The invention of dynamite, whereby he added new terrors to war and the establishment of the Nobel prizes, by which devoted to furthering the interests of the human race a large part of the millions he had made out of his explosive.

It was in the sixties that Alfred Bernhard Nobel, then 34 years old, a Swedish engineer and chemist, offered to sell to the British government for about $3,000 the secret of a new explosive he had discovered. After he had been kept waiting three months and had made repeated requests for a decision he was informed that his offer was declined with thanks, as neither the war office nor the board of trade saw anything valuable in the invention. He offered to sell a half interest in his discovery for about $160, but the man to whom he made the offer rejected it. The discovery thus offered for so small a price was dynamite.

Nobel had succeeded in doing what many scientists had been trying in vain to do—make a mixture of nitro-glycerine that would be safe to handle. His invention consisted in mixing the deadly explosive with silicious earth. It was simple and within a few years raised the inventor to enormous wealth. At his death in 1895 he left property which sold for about $9,000,000.
