Colorado An Hospitable Host for Big Party of Technical Men.

HOW THE SCHOOLS ARE BUILT

Wealthy Men of Centennial State Lavish Gifts Upon Educational Institutions for Benefit of Students.

During the past week the members of the American Society of Civil Engineers have been entertained by the city of Denver and the state of Colorado, the occasion being the annual convention of this organization. Speaking of the affair, Prof. R. R. Lyman says: "All who had the good fortune to enjoy the hospitality of the people of our neighbor state are full of praises for Denver and for the whole state of Colorado. There everybody seems to be doing everything possible for the good of the state of Colorado. They spare no pains whatever to convince those who chance to come within the borders of their state that in all the world there is no other spot as desirable for a home, no other spot as desirable from the business point of view and no other place in the world equal to it for having a good time and for meeting good, vigorous, up-to-date, wholesome citizens."

Governor Henry A. Buchtel in his address of welcome to members of this engineering society said in course of his remarks: "You will find as you go about in the city of Denver and in the state of Colorado people everywhere saying good things of the city and of this state, and this condition exists because of the unwritten law that any man, woman or child found in Colorado that is not praising the state, and the people, and the opportunities found therein, is to be drowned in Cherry creek."

MET IN CAPITAL.

"All the sessions of the convention were held in the senate chamber in the state capitol. Street paving, metal mining and irrigation were the most important subjects considered by the convention, with by far the greatest portion of the time devoted to a consideration of the irrigation projects that are now under way. It was a great surprise to many to learn from Mr. C. H. Newell, director of the U. S. reclamation service, what extensive work the government has undertaken to reclaim the desert lands of the west, and they were more surprised still when he gave the additional information that for every dollar the government is using for irrigation purposes private individuals and companies are investing perhaps ten dollars."

"Practically everything in Colorado was made free for the members of the society and for their friends. Street car books were distributed so freely that no member could use all the rides that were given to him. Tickets were distributed for the state normal school grounds of the city, a free trip was given the members and their friends over the famous "Moffat Road" that reaches to an elevation of 11,660 feet, which is an elevation greater than that reached by any other standard gauge road in the world, and perhaps without an equal for engineering feats and scenic beauty. The construction of this is being pushed on forward to Salt Lake City."

EXCURSION TO BOULDER.

"Another free excursion was given to Boulder, the home of the state university, to Fort Collins, where the Agricultural college is located, and to Greeley where the state normal school is located, and where an enormous quantity of famous Greeley potatoes is raised."

"To one who has not visited the schools of Colorado for several years perhaps the numerous new buildings with the equipment contained therein would surprise him most, and he would surely wonder how the state had been able to spend money so lavishly upon these structures, but the wondering visitor understands when some one says, 'This structure was built with funds contributed by the late W. S. Stratton, while another was constructed and equipped at a cost of $50,000, the gift of Mr. Simon Guggenheim.' The Utah man, when he learned these things, could not help but hope that some day, and that soon, the University of Utah would also be remembered by Utah's liberal men of wealth so that upon the campus of the university there would be constructed with money these men will give, buildings and equipment that will make Utah's situation the equal of any other in the country."

VAST FARMING COUNTRY.

"During all of the forenoon the train carried the guests of Colorado in one direction, and during the afternoon returned them in another direction, but all this time they were in an agricultural district that extended in all directions at all times as far as the eye could reach."

"The growth of the city of Denver is next to if not quite miraculous. Only fifty years ago last Saturday a group of travelers pitched their tents on the shores of Cherry creek and concluded that was a good place to build a city. Denver with its magnificent buildings, its well paved streets, and its 275,000 people is the result.

"Thirty-six years ago the first railroad was built into the city of Denver. Today Denver has twenty-two independent railroad lines. See how closely this comes to an average of one new railroad per year since the installation of these roads began. Utah was represented at this convention by William Ashton, chief engineer of the O. S. L. R. R. Co., Mr. M. M. Murtough, hydraulic engineer of this city, Prof. Richard R. Lyman of the University of Utah, and also by Mrs. Murtough and Mrs. Lyman."

TITUS IS ARRAIGNED

Alleged "Divine Healer" Pleads Not Guilty to Involuntary Manslaughter.

Charles S. Titus, the alleged "divine healer," whose two children died from hiphtheria as a result, is alleged, of his neglect to call in a physician, was before Judge Whitaker this morning on two charges of involuntary manslaughter. He was represented by Atty. Ben Johnson, who waived the reading of the two complaints and took until Monday to plead. At the request of counsel for the defense, the man was permitted to go on his own recognizance until Monday at which time a plea will be entered and, in all probability, a bond fixed.

PAY DAY FOR SOLDIERS.

In Its Wake Boys in Blue Str Things Up Generally.

A number of soldiers were out on a rampage last night, they made things lively from dark to daylight. Several arrests were made, the most important of which was that of Ben Thirkell, a member of C company, Fifteenth infantry. The others were charged with drunkenness only, but Thirkell will have the charge of robbery to face.

About 11 o'clock last night he entered the place of Little Davis, 228 south State street, and after spending some time in the woman's house, he stole two purses, two photographs, records, old coins of considerable value, and $15.

Officers Burton and Bush were sent after the man, and when the former placed him under arrest, Thirkell put up a fight, and it took both officers and a madman and landed several severe blows upon the officers before they were able to subdue him. He was taken to the police station and held in the cell. At the state normal school grounds of the city, a free trip was given the members and their friends over the famous "Moffat Road" that reaches to an elevation of 11,660 feet, which is an elevation greater than that reached by any other standard gauge road in the world, and perhaps without an equal for engineering feats and scenic beauty. The construction of this is being pushed on forward to Salt Lake City.

HAMS WERE EXPENSIVE.

Fordness for ham will prove rather expensive for Charles Berger, a butcher, aged 51 years. Yesterday afternoon Berger saw two choice hams hanging in front of White's market, 29 south West Temple street and he could not resist the temptation to appropriate them. Berger stole the hams and was making away with them when Officers Curran and Clough captured the man. This morning Berger pleaded guilty before Judge Whitaker in the criminal division of the city court and was sentenced to pay a fine of $50 or serve 60 days in the city jail. The latter will be his portion.

FIRE, BUT NO DAMAGE.

Sparks from a fire caused a small blaze at the Salt Lake mattress factory on Third West and Fifth North street this morning and the apparatus from station No. 2 was called out. The blaze was quickly put out and no damage was done.

CHESTER PRATT PROMOTED.

Entered Bell Company as Collector—Is Now a Superintendent.

Chester C. Pratt of the Rocky Mountain Bell Telephone company has been made superintendent of the Utah division of the company, according to an official announcement by General Superintendent H. Sommers, the appointment being effective today. Mr. Pratt entered the company's employ eight years ago as a collector. He took up the technical end of the business a year later, and after several years' work as a practical telephone man, entered the office of the general superintendent, whose chief clerk he was when his appointment as superintendent came. Mr. Pratt is son of Warden Arthur Pratt of the Utah state prison and is a native of Salt Lake City. In his new position, he will have jurisdiction over the entire state of Utah, but the Salt Lake division, which includes Salt Lake City, Murray, Bingham, Sandy, Bingham Junction and Garfield.

THE WYLIE CAMPING CO.

Well Known Institution Opens Offices Here for Yellowstone Traffic.

The new information that Salt Lake has attained as a camping point for Yellowstone excursionists, is well illustrated in the fact that the Wylie Permanent Camping company has opened its offices here. The company is the advertising of that company in the Salt Lake papers. The Wylie camps are well known to Yellowstone tourists from the fact that they have excellent service to travelers who do not wish to put up at the high class hotels, and to whom a cheaper ticket than that offered by the hotels, is an object. Many Salt Lake people have patronized the Wylie camps, pay testimonials to their excellent service. The Salt Lake office has been opened in the Commercial block, with William H. Leary, passenger agent, in charge.

WOMAN FIGHTS BIG SQUAD.

Five Policemen Have Lively Time in Making Arrest.

It took five big husky policemen last night to put into a cell at the city jail a little colored woman who is booked as Jane Doe. The young woman is white, and has a little woman's demure appearance, but when the officers tried to lock her up for drunkenness she put up a fight that would do credit to half a dozen Battling Sams. The officers engaged in the rough and tumble fight in the jail were Oison, Betz, Bush, Conyers and Sgt. Roberts. Conyers had the most strenuous time. He was the first to go down, and he was the last to get up. He went to the concrete floor several times in a catch-as-catch-can wrestling bout and he was unable to break the hold the woman laid on him until the other officers intervened.

In court this morning the woman refused to give her true name and also declined to plead. The case was continued until tomorrow morning and she was placed under $15 bail.

RAILROAD NEWS.

DELEGATION DIVIDED.

Democrats Can't Decide on Route by Which to Reach Denver.

It begins to look as if the Utah delegates to the Denver convention will go to the City of Lights in two parties. The Oregon Short Line has a special train for the delegates, and the Rio Grande has an extra car and observation car ordered for them. A Rio Grande sleeper diagram is in the hands of a leading Democrat and the Oregon Short Line has a diagram in the hands of another. And to listen to both railroads both diagrams are correct. The delegates are divided within itself. One member is especially determined that the trip be made via the Union Pacific, while several others are just as determined they go via the "scenic route." Charges are made, but no one will permit his name being used in connection with the matter, so nothing definite can be printed at this time.

It was reported that a meeting will be held this afternoon to get the thing straightened out; a similar meeting was held some days ago, but nothing came out of it. From the story told it appears that the delegates are destined to travel in two parties. Both sides are determined to stand by their desires.

The Rio Grande has received word that the California delegations and the northwest delegates will be here at 8 o'clock on the morning of July 4, and after seeing the city, they are to attend a concert, the travelers will proceed to Denver by special train over the Rio Grande. The Rio Grande contends putting the delegates in the hands of a leading Democrat and the Oregon Short Line has a diagram in the hands of another. And to listen to both railroads both diagrams are correct. The delegates are divided within itself. One member is especially determined that the trip be made via the Union Pacific, while several others are just as determined they go via the "scenic route." Charges are made, but no one will permit his name being used in connection with the matter, so nothing definite can be printed at this time.

J. A. Reeves, general freight agent of the Oregon Short Line, is back from a trip through Idaho, where he has been irrigating and prosperity keeping the people busy.

Officials of the Harriman systems who have been out on a 15-day inspection and instruction trip over Harriman and allied lines, have returned. The journey covered a distance of 4,500 miles and consumed 15 days. The party consisted of G. H. Olmstead, superintendent of Idaho division, with headquarters at Pocatello; A. F. Brewer, car service agent, Salt Lake; E. W. Newcomb, signal engineer, Pocatello; Thomas Fitzgerald, resident engineer, Ogden; G. H. Smith, assistant attorney, Salt Lake; S. E. Canady, trainmaster, Salt Lake; and J. S. Johnson, chief dispatcher, Sparks, Nev.

HARRY ORCHARD WILL NOT HANG

Boise, Ida., July 1.—Harry Orchard's sentence of death has been commuted to life imprisonment by the state board of pardons in session this morning. Thus, within 18 hours of the time he was to have forfeited his life for the murder of former Governor Steunenberg and the other atrocious crimes revealed in the Moyer-Haywood-Pettibone trials through his confession, Orchard had refused to go before the board seeking clemency, but interested in his case were many others. On his behalf these took up the task of securing the commutation and, as today's results show, their efforts were successful. Orchard, upon his plea of guilty to the charge of murdering Governor Steunenberg, was sentenced to be hanged Friday, July 3.

Convicted of Assault on Fellow Prisoner at State Penitentiary.

Gust Johnson, who was convicted Monday of committing an assault upon S. B. Dobbs, a fellow prisoner at the state penitentiary, was this morning sentenced to serve five years in the offense, time of service to begin at the expiration of the sentence now being served by Johnson. He is now on the third year of a 10-year term for burglary, and the additional five years tacked on to his sentence this morning will give him yet 12 years to serve, which will not be reduced for good conduct if he keeps up his past record in prison. Dobbs, the colored prisoner who was attacked by Johnson, was so severely injured that he spent a month in the hospital, and his recovery was considered for a time to be problematical.

THE NATION'S STRONG BOX.

Never a Dollar Has Ever Been Taken from It By Force.

Not a dollar has ever been taken from the United States Treasury by force, but some of the older watchmen in the great buildings tell stories of attempted break-ins of the nation's wealth by robbers and bandits. Why these attempts were never carried successfully through is claimed to be due to the fact that the men lost their lives.

Perhaps the nearest approach to looting the vaults of the treasury was the time Martin Broadfoot had his plans about perfected. This was back in the eighties, and the plan was to get into the building by means of the great sewer which runs under and near the treasury and known as the Fifteenth-street sewer, and which grows larger as it enters the Potomac about three-quarters of a mile from the White House.

Broadfoot's plan, as developed after his arrest, was to get into the building, crack the safes, and place the money in large bags and take them down the sewer to the Potomac, where his pals would be in waiting. These bags were found in his room when he was arrested, and secret-service men had often seen him walking along the shores of the Potomac near where the big sewer empties. This sewer is about nine feet in diameter where it passes the treasury, and a man could easily make his way up the sewer through a stream of water, which under normal conditions is only about twelve inches deep.

Entering the sewer at the Potomac, the journey to the treasury could be made by keeping a sharp lookout. When the man or men in the sewer reached the Potomac, they would separate them from the gold coin and bullion except about eighteen feet of earth and not too secure stone wall. It was Broadfoot's scheme to dig his way through this obstruction and to let the earth float or wash down the sewer. It would not have taken one man more than two weeks, working only at night, to have made an opening large enough for a man to crawl through. Of course Broadfoot knew the exact location of the vaults, and when he reached them he would have had no trouble in getting the gold coin and bullion. It was evidently his purpose to fill the rubber bags with the precious stuff and float them down the sewer to the river, where they would be looked after by his confederates. This was the only really well-laid plot ever made to loot the treasury.

Just why Broadfoot was never given a trial has never been known to the public. He was an intelligent man, and suspicion was first aroused against him by his frequent visits to the money-rooms and vaults, and by the questions he asked watchmen and messengers as to the hours of duty when the vaults were closed, and what time they opened, and all such questions. That he could have successfully carried out his plans so far as getting into the building and the vaults are concerned there is no question, for men have been in the sewer and conduits who say that it would have been easy work. The most difficult part of the job would have been in getting away with the money and bullion, for it would have required hard work to carry the money out of the vaults.

An old treasury watchman said: "We are constantly on the lookout, and suspicious persons are watched. I believe it is wrong to admit any and everybody to the vaults and allow them to handle the packages and sacks of money. It gives some people bad ideas to be permitted to handle so much of money, and they begin to study how they can get possession of some of it. If the treasury is ever robbed, it will be on a big scale."

It is the opinion of the secret-service men that many celebrated cracksmen have from time to time contemplated the conversion of a few million treasury notes to their own use, but after careful study they have decided that the undertaking was too colossal in character. Secretary Folger, when he assumed his duties, was not slow in deciding that the treasury was to be properly and safely guarded; there was not an electric alarm in the building; the watchmen were isolated and had no facilities for calling help; and the safes of the old-time-lock-and-key sort scattered almost all over the big building. The secretary went to work to bring about a proper system of guarding the treasury, and the system completed changed and reorganized, putting men under the strictest discipline; elaborate and extensive safes were installed; the old safes were replaced by modern steel combinations; the gold and silver vaults were fitted with steel casings and time locks; different parts of the various officials so that the vaults could be opened only with the combined action of all of them, and then only at the stroke of the hour for which the time locks had been set.

But without a perfect system of watchmen to guard the safes the treasury could not be easily robbed, for the most perfect safe ever made is not proof against the professionals. It has not been a great while since a safe expert was summoned from New York to open a safe in the treasury, and he accomplished his work in two minutes. He then went through the building and opened every safe after the other, explaining to the officials that the expert cracksmen did not care about time locks, but his main fear was the police.

The watch force of the treasury is perfectly organized, and the least infraction of rules means a lay-off or discharge. The men seem to realize the heavy responsibilities resting upon them, and they are careful almost to a fault. The watch is divided into three reliefs, the four of duty lasts for eight hours. The midnight watch is considered the most important of the three on account of the well-known nocturnal preferences of burglars. However, the captain of the watch is of the opinion that the day watch needs to be on the lookout for surprises. It is his belief that should ever an attempt be made to loot the treasury it will be made in the day time. He bases this belief on the fact that to gain an entrance to the building after dark would necessitate the battering down of doors or the use of dynamite, for all the entrances are locked and guarded after 4 o'clock. While this work of forcing an entrance was going on the district police, the national guard, the soldiers from Fort Meyer and Washington Barracks and the marine barracks could be called to the treasury, as the building is in electric connection with communication with them for all such emergencies. A broad daylight invasion of robbers would be more difficult to handle than a night attack.

However, the watch does not anticipate an attack by robbers, but they are prepared for any emergency, and they will not be caught napping should one ever be made either at night or by day. Each watchman is a regular walking arsenal, and the instructions are to shoot and shoot to kill—Los Angeles Times.
