ON LIFE'S WAY.

Comfort one another,
The way is often weary,
The feet are often weary,
The heart is very sad;
A heavy burden bearing,
It seems that none are caring, We half forget that ever we Were glad.

Comfort one another,
The heart-clip, close and tender,
The sweetness love can render,
The books of friendly eyes,
The walk with grace unspoken, The life's daily bread is broken, The speech is oft like manna from The skies.

NOTES.

Mr. Hope, having arrived in New York, has declared his intention to amuse himself in this country for weeks or so. He will give no more of his novels, as upon his trip to this country, in an interview with the American reading public, he was asked what he thought of his advertising methods, and how he would have his novels conspicuously placed in shops and billboards of the city of commerce. "You don't know how it feels," he said, "I believe they have ever done it to me." Mr. Hope, however, is mistaken in his last novel, "The Intramural," was extensively advertised in New York by the placard system.

Some amount of money Mrs. Ward received from Harper's Magazine for the rights of "Lady Rose," the most interesting and successful of her contributions. One experienced literature critic writes that as the book of the novel also went to the press in accordance with an intelligent review of the house. Mrs. Ward could not receive more than $25,000 for rights. Adding to this her rights on the sales of the book, she promises to be enormous. It is said that Mrs. Ward will reap a total of $100,000 on "Lady Rose." The publishers, however, claiming their custom, refuse to divide the figures in the case. On top of this report that Conan Doyle received a total of £21,500 for 12 novels of 10,000 words each.

Mrs. Barte's literary executors have received a valuable manuscript to the more volume to the succession of her short stories which has appeared nearly every year for the last 20 years. The volume will contain seven stories, as published by Houghton, Mifflin & Co. in April, under the title "Trent's Princess."

The new novel will be issued by Longmans, Green & Co. It deals with the conquest of the Romans, and is called "The Roman." The design for the book is an archaeological interest and a copy of the design of the arch of Titus, representing the triumphal arch and altar table from the Jewish temple, being the triumphal procession in Rome.

It was in London in the fifties, Mr. Walter Besant's novel of the old low-ceiling, with a sandal floor, two feet below the sidewalk, I used to read and drink "alt-and-auf." I was sitting beside a large man in a cloak entered, his eyes were bright, and his bushy hair fell all down with quick expression. He sat down and came to me, and directly a plate of cheese and a glass of ale, brought him before him. He ate and drank, and after finishing his ale, he took up a book, and his eyes were bright. Suddenly he reached out with all his strength, smashing the book on my face. He got up and walked slowly, tipped his hat, and he had not uttered a word.

ending his anecdotes. One day the old man turned suddenly upon Mr. Peake, to whom he had never spoken before, and said, "Young man, I understand you are a writer of stories."
"Yes, sir," said the convicted author, "Well, let me tell you, young man, The lye has put me next to you, and if ever I hear of you puttin' me in a story, I'll break every bone in your body."
Mr. Peake says that this had begin-ance with one of the most interesting characters he ever knew.

BOOKS.

No more suitable book for Easter could be imagined than Bishop Lawrence's study of "Phillips Brooks," which Houghton, Mifflin & Co. have just published, bound in white and gold and containing a photograph of the little volume brings out in a masterly way the great preacher's more permanent contribution to the religious thought and life of the time. It is a sketch of his theological position, of his attitude towards the intellectual and spiritual movements of the nineteenth century, of the leading features of his own thought, and of his relations to the church. It was delivered as an address from the pulpit of Phillips Brooks in Trinity Church, Boston, Jan. 23, 1903, at a commemorative service held by the two dioceses in the state of Massachusetts, on the tenth anniversary of the death of their late Bishop. It is a model of eloquence, good taste, and inspiration which all admirers of Bishop Brooks will desire to possess.

Ronald Carnaguia, a Commercial Clergyman, a novel on the press for early issue by The Macmillan company, will find many readers. The never failing humor and pathos of a pastor's relations with his congregation, his trustees and some of the women of his flock have been skillfully handled by the author, Mr. Bradley Gilman. The plot is both probable and interesting, just that kind of story which in the opinion of the members of every church should be read by the members of every other church. All church people are likely to enjoy it and after having read it will probably spend a pleasant hour in talking over the story with acquaintances. One of the chief interests of the story lies in the development of the character of the rector who has been a commercial traveler, and who goes into the church for what he can get out of it. The woman in the story is a widow, young and not without charm, and it is her influence on the commercial rector around which the story plays.

Audier and Sandeau's Le Gendre de M. Poiret, edited by Edwin Carl Rod-er, Ph. D., instructor in German, University of Wisconsin, is just published by the American Book company. This is the brightest and most sparkling of Audier and Sandeau's comedies, and illustrates the good and evil qualities of wealth and birth as shown in an unequal marriage. The action is rapid and spirited, and the play is full of healthy humor and sound morality. It is one of the selections recommended for reading by the Modern Language association. The edition before us contains a helpful introduction, notes explaining idioms and allusions, and a complete vocabulary.

MAGAZINES.

Mr. Hermann Klein begins in the April number of The Century Magazine a series of articles which deal with the opera folk who he has known. During the period 1870 to 1900 Mr. Klein was a prominent musical critic in London, and most of the notable figures in the world of music were his intimate friends. The first paper, "Modern Musical Celebrities," sets forth the author's personal recollections of such well known composers as Verdi, Wagner, Gounod, Liszt, and Paderewski. The later papers are to treat of famous singers, among them Adella Patti and M. Jean de Reszke. Not the least interesting feature of these articles, so it is said, is Mr. Klein's gossipy talk on the mounting of grand opera, particularly so his recollections of the vigilantes and triumphs of the late Sir Augustus Harris. It was while attending a rehearsal of a Drury Lane melodrama, which was being staged by his friend Harris, that Mr. Klein met across Lord Kitchener, then major, obligingly drilling the suppers for a martial scene. Among the many little anecdotes which go to demonstrate the personal character of these reminiscences may be mentioned the author's description of how he and Edouard de Reszke used to burlesque Wagner opera in the old days, for the benefit of the grinning and appreciative Jean. Mr. Klein has been an important high modern factor in the development of grand opera in England, and his advice was much sought both by impresarios and artists.
Himself a musician of high standing, he was after the death of West Hill, in 1896, made director of the opera at the Guildhall School of Music, London.
He is the composer of several successful songs. Charles Klein, a brother, was the librettist of "El Capitain."

The Youth's Companion for this week has some excellent material, including three interesting short stories and the final chapter in the serial "The Captain's Daughter" and the usual good poetry and material in the departments.

The Arena for April opens with a thoughtful and timely paper by John M.
Bertram, Ph.D., on "American Literature and the High Schools." This is followed by a suggestive "Plan for Simpler Living;" from the pen of the Hon. Samuel M. Jones, mayor of Toledo.
"Hamlet, Prince of Denmark" is the title of a profound essay by Dr. Axel Emil Gibson. "Democracy or Autocracy—Which?" is considered by J. W.
Bennett, and B. O. Flower presents "The Message of Mazzini," the second paper of a series on the Italian patriot.
A Study in Advertising," by Henry C.
Shawyer, is a uniquely interesting production, and "Modern Dramatic Revision," by Fannie Humphreys Gaffney, is one of the best articles of the number. An interview with J. M. Peebles, A. M. M. D., on "New Zealand—Political, Social, and Religious," is most entertaining, and "The Town That Was Sold," a prophetic satire by P. M. Cross-by Macnussen, A. M., Ph.D., is of timely significance. Editor Flower's department of "Topics of the Times" and Books of the Day" are usually interesting and instructive. Editor McLean announces a symposium on "Mormonism and Polygamy" for the May number.—The Alliance Pub. Co., Fifth Ave.,

FREE MEDICAL ADVICE TO WOMEN.

All Correspondence Is

Sacredly Confidential

This is a very important consideration in a woman's correspondence with Mrs. Pinkham. It is a great satisfaction to feel that one woman can write to another telling her the most private and confidential details about her illness, and know that her letter will be seen by a woman only,—a woman full of sympathy for her sick sisters, and with a knowledge of woman's ills greater than that possessed by any other person.

Mrs. Pinkham never violates the confidence thus entrusted to her, and although she publishes thousands of testimonials from women who have been benefited by her advice and medicine, never in all her experience has she published such a letter without the full consent, and often by special request of the writer.

The reason Mrs. Pinkham is so amply qualified to give advice in cases of female ills is for the reason that over one hundred thousand cases come before her each year,—some personally, others by mail, and this has been going on for twenty years, day after day, and day after day. Twenty years of constant success,—think of the knowledge thus gained. Surely, women are wise in seeking advice from a woman of such experience, especially when it is absolutely free.

As an illustration of the good coming from such advice we herewith publish two letters and portrait of Miss Hattie DeGroat, the reading of which should give every sick woman confidence in Mrs. Pinkham's ability to help them. This is only one of thousands of the same kind of letters which Mrs. Pinkham has on file.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I have read with interest your advice to others so much that I thought I would write to you, for I have been suffering for a long time. I have such bearing-down pains, and such shooting pains go through me. I have headache, backache, and feel tired. Menstruation is very painful, sometimes have to stop work and lie down. My stomach bloats terribly, and I am troubled with whites. Hoping to hear from you soon, I remain, July 24th, 1900.
MISS HATTIE DEGROAT, Successuma, N. J."

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I can hardly find words to thank you for your advice and wonderful Vegetable Compound. I was in a terrible state, every part of my body ached, was very nervous, had hysterical spells. I think I would have become insane had it not been for Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Your letter told me just what to do, and your medicine cured me, and I cannot express my thanks."
March 8th, 1901.

No other medicine in the world has received such widespread and unqualified endorsement. No other medicine has such a record of that any other medicine is just as good. Any dealer who suggests something else has no interest in your case. He is seeking a larger profit. Follow the record of this medicine, and remember that the thousands of cures of women whose letters are constantly printed in this paper were not brought about by "something else," but by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Dear Sirs,—
In reply to your favor I would state that I have used the Putnam Nail for several years, and have advised my friends to use it only. It is hardly necessary for me to add that I prefer it to all others.
