

in buckets. They carried on the work in a miniature way like they were marching on top of a skyscraper and won the applause of the crowd from one end of the line of march to the other. The judges awarded them the prize for the best float representing their craft. The groupworkers were dressed in blue shirts and corduroy trousers. There were 200 men in line.

These 200 groupworkers were considered the best by the judges and it took some time to decide which should have the prize for the float and which for the best uniforms and line of march. There were several other organizations which gave the prize winners a "hard run for their money."

YELLOW DOG IN LINE

The local clubbers' union, which is now on strike, had a good representation. They were led by a large yellow dog which was saddled with a banner: "I would rather be a yellow dog than a scab."

The Journeymen Stonecutters, who claim that they are the players of the eight hour law, were in force. They were dressed in white overalls and made a strong show. The bricklayers' union turned out 400 members. They marched in four columns carrying cans and flags.

RECORD NUMBER

The carpenters probably had the most men in line. It was estimated that there are 600 men in the organization. A prize will be given by the committee to the float which is judged to be the best.

The Lathers' union had an umbrella made of lath which were unique in design. The bookmakers carried a banner demanding state inspection of bookies. The banner read "Bookies will expire."

The Retail Clerks' association had a float in their line of parade. The float was a banner which read, "Do your shopping early on Saturday. Buy in before 9 o'clock."

In the Bookmakers' union there were about 50 women. They rode in carriages which were decorated with bunting.

The streetcar men's union made an excellent showing. They were led by their band which was warmly applauded.

The newsmen's union brought up the rear of the parade, pulling a newspaper street wagon. They carried papers and bootblack boxes.

THE PARADE

The Labor day parade was perhaps the most imposing one ever witnessed in the city. Prior to the starting of the parade shortly after 10 o'clock, the various divisions formed in line on the side streets converging at the corner of Fourth and State.

The parade began its march from the corner of Fourth and State. The holiday attire of the participants and the flying of standards and banners gave a gala appearance to the streets and the spirit which was partaken of by the thousands of onlookers gathered to see the parade.

Altogether there were eight bands in the parade. Five of them furnished by Held, who had 75 musicians in line. In addition to this array of brass talent the streetcar union furnished a band of 25 pieces, the Ladies' G. A. R. band of 20 pieces and the Utah State band of 15 pieces joined in the procession.

At the head of the parade was a squad of policemen, headed by Lieut. Shannon, including 10 mounted police, two sergeants and 16 patrolmen. Following these came the fire department, which was represented by several steamers, chemicals, hook and ladder wagons and hose carts from several of the fire stations in the city, with a full complement of men.

The International Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners followed, headed by the District Council of Carpenters, 64 strong. The second organization of Amalgamated carpenters followed with 55 in line, and members of the Millmen's union came next with a representation of 100.

STONECUTTERS IN LINE

Next in line followed the Plumbers' union, with 125 men. The Iron Workers of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers came next with 50 members, followed by the Building Labor and Protective association with 100 members. The Sheet Metal Workers came next with 72 members, with the Stonecutters' union, 60 strong following.

The stonecutters had one of the striking floats of the parade, consisting of a four-cornered arch constructed of stone and decorated with red carnations. In the center of the float appropriately draped, sat Miss Mabel Tate, (dubbed the "Ladies' Choice") toward which all good stonecutters gravitate.

Thirty members of the International Union of Steam Engineers followed the Stonecutters and preceded the Brickworkers, to whom they declared they "delivered the goods." A feature of the parade was the model of a steel bridge, of the type known as the cantilever, which was carried by the International Brick and Structural Iron workers, who gave a practical demonstration of their work of working with red hot rivets during the parade. There were 150 bridge workers in line.

Next came the Masons with 250 men in line. They were followed by 12 members of the International Journeymen Horseshoers, strikingly attired in red flannel shirts and clean leather aprons. The Iron Molders, 108 strong followed in neat black costumes with white caps. The International Brotherhood of Bailmakers, 24 in line, came next, followed by 40 members of the International Association of Machinists. The Women's auxiliary, with 20 members, accompanied the machinists, following the machinists. A float which attracted considerable attention was the drag wagon bearing half a dozen caskets from the Denver & Rio Grande yards, with the placard on the side of the drag with the words, "Duckworth's Patrol."

The International Union of Hodcarriers and Building Labor was represented by 30 men, while the American Brotherhood of Cement Finishers, followed with 120 men in line. The Painters, in immaculate white costumes, made a splendid showing with a typical float and 40 men in line.

BOYS IN AUTOMOBILES

Sixty members of the Lathers' union followed. The Painters, Decorators and Paperhangers, 30 in line, made a fine showing both as to number and appearance. They wore white costumes, while the members of the High and Pictorial union rode in automobiles.

Then followed 30 members of the Amalgamated Association of Street and Electric Railway Employees of America, headed by their own brass band. The street car men dropped out at Fifth South street on the counter-march, so many of them were coming.

At 1 o'clock the parade was over.
