paper published between Denver and the Coast.

Mr. Savage by Ralph Ramsey, the man who carved from native wood, the bird of freedom which has so long surmounted the Eagle Gate, now being given a new copper coating. President Young, as is well known, first saw the light of mortality one hundred years ago today in the township of Whitingham, Wyndham county, Vermont. That section of country is rough and broken and thickly wooded with oak, hemlock, spruce and other trees characteristic of the Atlantic coast. Hon. Spencer Clawson, a son-in-law of the illustrious President, recently paid a visit to that picturesque spot. He says that it is as thoroughly New England and as "typical Yankee" as any part of the United States. The township contains about 500 people, who live practically as their ancestors did a century ago. Mr. Clawson says the surroundings and the customs of the people reminded him strongly of the scenes in the "Old Homestead," "Sag Harbor," "Way Down East," and other plays of that kind. There was the public house, the old cross roads, store, pump, bridge and various other objects of rural simplicity. A unique and interesting character he met was Judge Hosea Blue, an out and out Yankee. Mr Clawson inquired of the judge if he could point out the spot where Brigham Young was born. The answer was in the affirmative, supplemented by the statement that it was "out in the orchard." Mr. Clawson was led into the orchard which was on the top of a mountain. Sure enough there were the foundations of the house where the President was born, plainly visible above the ground, though partially covered with earth and decaying vegetable matter. Mr. Clawson inquired whether there would be danger of the mutilation or defacement of a monument in the event that one were erected on the spot out of respect to the memory of the departed pioneer and statesman. The reply was emphatically in the negative. It was further asserted that such a monument would be carefully guarded and looked upon as an object of much interest, as many tourists passing through the country made it a point to visit the place and dilate upon the life and achievements of President Young. Whether such a shaft will be erected is a problem for future consideration and solution. and humbleentrance of a character that will receive added lustre through the friction of years. The ladies of St. Paul's chapel are holding a rummage sale at St. Mark's school house, which will continue Mon-day and Tuesday. Today's sales were numerous and with the two days to come will doubtless net a neat sum for the purpose to which the proceeds will be devoted. . . .

The marriage of Miss Ella C. Little and Dr. W. H. Bucher will take place next week, . . .

The annual reception of the Salt Lake high school alumni will be held in the assembly room of the high school on June 10th. . . .

On Tuesday night a reception will be held at the Bee Hive house by the gen-eral boards of the Y. M. and Y. L. M. I. for the visiting Stake officers of the M. I. A. . . .

On next Thursday at the commence-ment exercises of the L. D. S. U. Mrs. Alice M. Horne, who has had charge of the art department of the school, will award a prize for the best work done during the year. The prize is in the shape of a copy of Michael Angela's David taken from the original painting, and Miss May Teasdel will act as . . .

The marriage of Mr. Alex S. Camp-bell and Miss Alice Y. Clawson will occur on June 11 in this city. Immediately after the wedding reception, which will be a quiet affair, they will leave for a visit to the Pan-American Exposition and New York City, Mr. Campbell is well known as a popular stock broker as well as a successful amateur actor and singer, while Miss Clawson is the daughter of Bishop H. B. Clawson, and one of the most charming of the social circle in which she moves.

Mr. and Mrs. S. A. Whitney expect to visit the Pan-American exposition in June, and will probably make the trip with their friends, Mr. A. S. Camp-bell and his bride.
