JOY TO THE AFFLICTED!

LAUGHING GAS!

FOR the Million! I take pleasure in informing my numerous friends and the Public, that I have been to great expense and trouble in buying the Patent Right for Salt Lake City for the best Nitrous Oxide Gas Apparatus that is in existence, as is proved by its being used by the Royal Families of England, France and Belgium, also by Dr. Colton, in the Dental Institute, New York.

The Gas made by this Apparatus only is absolutely pure, and no unpleasant choking or strangling sensation is experienced, or any disgusting bag used in taking it, but you can breathe perfectly natural every way, and you would not suspect that you were breathing anything but the purest air. It is, in fact, the plus ultra of all methods for the painless extraction of Teeth.

I have a large supply of the same Teeth which took the First Premium in Paris last summer. Also five different kinds of Rubber for inserting Teeth, including the kinds used in England and France.

Particular attention given to preserving the natural Teeth. Terms moderate. Call and see.
Dr. Wm. H. GROVES, 2d South St., Salt Lake City.

A VOICE FROM THE DEAR ONES.

On the death of James C. and Mary E., children of James and Rebecca Reece, Payson.

Father and mother, we live with God

In the glorious realms of day,

Though our bodies are sleeping beneath the sod,

In the dark land where you stay.

O, we hear the angel's song of praise,

And drink of its deep delight;

And we bask in truth's refulgent rays,

As they beam towards the vales of night.

We have seen what bitter tears were shed,

As we hastened up on high,

And we heard you say, that we were dead;—

O, the sinless never die!

Then weep not, weep not, for we are here,

Where flowers immortal grow,

Arrayed in the robes the angels wear,

Robes, white as the virgin snow.

Payson. R. SMYTH.

CHARLES KEAN.

The following is an extract from a private letter recently received from England:

"Charles Kean, the tragedian, has recently died, and his life had sufficient importance to call from the press generally an elaborate obituary. Of those papers whose remarks I have read not one has traced his descent further back than his father, Edmund Kean. They have all ignored the great forefather from whom, after a lapse of one hundred years, he derived the inspiration (though sadly diluted) which made him what he was.

"In the reign of the Stuarts, and William, Prince of Orange, the first statesman, ingenious, was George Saville, Marquis of Halifax, gifted with eloquence and conversation, overflowing with thought, fancy and wit, an intellect fertile, subtle and capacious, a writer of political tracts, whose literary merits entitle him to a place among English classics." He was the most brilliant and far-seeing man of his age. His wonderful foresight, by which he saw passing events, not in the point of view in which they commonly appear to one who bears a part in them, but in the point of view in which, after the lapse of many years, they appear to the philosophic historian, rendered it impossible for him to act long with any political party, and thus to many of his contemporaries he appeared to be a man without principles, an actor, and was called, in the slang of the day, a trimmer. He left a natural son, Henry Carey, a successful dramatic author and the writer of gay and spirited verses, some of which still live in the memory of hundreds of thousands (God save the King, &c., among them.) From Henry Carey descended Charles Kean, weakened by transmission through more than one hundred years. The great versatility of genius and peculiar turn of mind which made Halifax seem an actor cropped out at last in making two of his descendants, both men of mark in their walk, real actors. Compared with the theatre which their great ancestor charmed, their stage was small, their audience nobodies, their life a sham; but still there is a resemblance. In the son's features we can trace some of the lineaments of the father. Changed, disguised, muddled, the identity is not entirely lost—the voice is the voice of Jacob."—Ed.

and a considerable amount is annually spent in its purchase. The pecuniary loss thus incurred is the least of the
