

A THREE HORSE TEAM.

A Berrimore Arrangement of Four Horses and Drawn.

Three horses from time to time are used on the farm. One horse with a team to the three horse wagon pulls the cart in the east, but are often used with three horses. Following is the description:

Three or four years ago I began my wagon teams. I bought another and made a team of four horses and a team. I saved the pole off about four or six inches from the handle and made a team on the end. I had a scowling about 20 inches square and 2 feet 4 inches long, and made a suitcase in the middle for the team. On the pole made a small team, which cost $10. Two poles of iron, on the side of the pole, with holes for the rods, that goes through the teams. Also a rod of iron goes through the pole down to the crosspiece. When the rods are set back, it makes the teams very solid. In the east, A is the hind wheel, B is the front axis of the wagon and P the pole.

The rear poles are twenty-eight inches long. The middle ring is ten inches from the outer end of each pole. The ring on the end are fastened with a clip and two nuts. A leather strap goes over the rear ring to keep the chain tight. The rear middle rings are connected by a third ring for the middle horse's strap. I use hip breeding. The length of the poles and their distance apart depend upon the size of horses. My horses weigh 1,100 lbs. each. The team is 10 ft. 6 in. long. The distance between the centers of the horses is 5 ft. You can see by the cut of owners (Fig. 2) that I can hitch short, and being the load close to the back rod, that holds the poles to the wagon. The poles should be wider apart at the ends than at the extremes. Mine are twenty-eight inches apart at the ends and thirty or thirty-one and a half inches at the center.

FIG. 2—THREE HORSE TEAM.

I use an owner that I use on a sulky place. This kind of a rig gives the vehicle a wide range of motion. The team has two kinds of drivers and prevents the wheels from getting into each other, and with the stock you described a team can hold back with ease.

How Some Game Fish Die.

The carp carries his teeth back in his throat, so that when he has a touch there he does not know whether to seek for the doctor or the dentist. He sometimes sees the sun in the respect that he cannot see it. He has lost his sight, some of the other victims of the sea do not also perish to the carp, for he would be a much more useful fish if this were so, although it would not be possible for him to give milk, as does one good breast friend, owing to the certain destruction of every drop of it by the tree in which he lives, and which, as many of the readers of this paper know, is full of water.

The heron always eats its food with its beak wide open, a very cautious thing to do for such a sharp oyster beak with its beak. The eyes would stare to death if they had to walk as long as little boys and girls do for their beaks to grow. But fortunately they have to do nothing of the sort, although, to tell the truth, the oyster beak is hardly more perishable than that of the smoothest little boy or girl in the world.—J. K. Bangs in Harper's Young People.

Bitterly Comed Alibi.

In the course of an investigation, part of which has already been communicated to the Royal Society, Professor Roberts-Austen has discovered the most brilliantly colored alloy as yet known. It has a rich purple color, and bright ruby tints are obtained when light is reflected from one surface of the alloy to another. It contains about 75 per cent of gold, the rest being aluminum. The contents of the aluminum gold series of alloys are now being examined.—Nature.

Works of Sale.

Part Journal advises publishing brochures of every plume house with reference to their goods.

The Chinese provide a handsome sum for actors and waiters.

It is claimed that fresh laid salt is much more likely to succeed if covered with about an inch of fine soil. This will save it even in a dry time, when otherwise it would fail to get a good start.

The acreage of bearing vines in California is 100,000,000 acres. New York comes next with 65,000 acres, and Ohio with 20,000 acres. Missouri, 10,000 acres.

A Book Where Women Trade.

The Puff Adder book carries over 2,000 names, in 100 pages, with a list of 1000 names in the index. No book in the country carries such a perfect service of women's names. To receive a complete list of names of women who have given their names to the Puff Adder, send 25c to the author, and she will forward them to you.

The author, Mrs. Anna C. Ladd, has written a book on the subject of women's names. The book is the result of her researches and studies, and it is a valuable addition to the library of any woman who is interested in the history of women.

Blodoo Island Savings Banks.

Blodoo Island contains thirty-eight mutual savings banks. They pay a small interest on deposits like 5 per cent, but a feature of these savings is that the depositors receive dividends on the profits made by the bank, after the number of building associations. This feature has made the mutual savings banks as popular as new in Blodoo Island. There are 200,000,000 dollars deposited in them.

The people of Blodoo Island have put by small savings that amount to that much in the aggregate. Blodoo Island has little agricultural resources to speak of. Most working people labor mainly in the factories and the wages paid by these factories make sufficiencies of the operatives. Yet, little by little, laying by many cents a dollar a week, the thirty Yankees of the little island state in the Union have $20,000,000 put away for a rainy day.

All Blodoo Island contains a population of a little more than one thousand, and that is the city of Chicago.

The whole state is about equal to Connecticut, in which Chicago is located.

Yet, assessing the money lost by the mutual savings banks deposits in Blodoo Island, it is found that it amounts to $20,000 per capita. This is probably the last saving of any savings bank or building association deposits in the country.
